Garrett Ray Zimmer

Hermiston

October 1, 1992-December 28, 2014

Garrett Ray Zimmer, 22, was called home on December 28th, 2014, in his hometown of Klamath Falls, Ore. Garrett was born on October 1, 1992, in Pendleton, Ore., to Brad and Jennifer Zimmer.

Garrett was an amazing young man; he had a zest for life that was contagious. Anyone who encountered him enjoyed his million dollar smile and that oh so bright twinkle in his eyes. He always taught others to never take a moment in this life for granted and not to dwell on anything negative. He felt that every day was a gift, and he certainly lived his life to the fullest.

Garrett graduated from Henley High School in Klamath Falls in 2011, where he was voted most likely to be a millionaire, most dependable and, of course, he was also voted most mischievous. He moved to Hermiston, Ore., in 2012 to work alongside his grandfather, Dell Ray Zimmer, at Farmers Insurance. Shortly after, Garrett decided to build his own agency next to his grandfather. Garrett was a third generation agent with Farmers Insurance. He was set to take over the legacy of his grandfather's agency after Dell Ray retired on January 1, 2015.

Garrett was the youngest member of the Rotary Club in Hermiston, Ore., as well as a member of Toastmasters.

Garrett is survived by his parents, Brad and Jennifer Zimmer, sister Katelynn Zimmer and brother Devin Zimmer, all of Klamath Falls, Ore., grandparents Judy and Dell Ray Zimmer of Kennewick, Wash., and William and Sandra Rill, also of Kennewick, Wash., as well as many loving aunts, uncles, cousins and friends.

A celebration of Garrett's life will be held on Saturday, January 3rd at 2:00 p.m. at Bible Baptist Church in Klamath Falls, Oregon. Garrett will be laid to rest in his mother's hometown of Hep-pner, Oregon. There will be a graveside service in Hep-pner on Monday, January 5th at 2:00 p.m.

New laws OK wine shipments, ban tiger selfies

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — New state laws taking effect Thursday give livestock in California more living room, approve direct-to-consumer wine shipments in Massachusetts and levy the ultimate punishment on wannabe teen drivers in Nevada by denying them licenses if they skip too much school.

Other laws will allow trained school personnel in Tennessee to administer insulin, let Louisiana teens as young as 16 register to vote, crack down on meth dealers in Michigan, end tax breaks for Hollywood in North Carolina and raise the minimum wage in Ohio, New York, Rhode Island and elsewhere.

Although it doesn't take effect until early February, a New York law captures this year's "Who knew?" prize by banning tiger selfies, which have been used by young men as profile photos on social media sites.

A look at some of the new laws taking effect Jan. 1, in alphabetical order by topic:

ALCOHOL

Wine connoisseurs will be popping the cork over a new law taking effect Thursday that allows out-of-state wineries to ship bottles directly to consumers in Massachusetts. The drive for direct wine shipments had been stalled for years before getting a big boost from former New England Patriots quarterback Drew Bledsoe. Now a winemaker in Washington state, Bledsoe complained to lawmakers he could not send his products to Massachusetts residents, including fans and former teammates like current Patriots quarterback Tom Brady.

ANIMALS

In California, a ballot initiative approved by voters in 2008 takes effect restricting the confinement of egg-laying hens, breeding sows and veal calves. The Humane Society of the United States says the law goes further than any in the country when coupled with a law signed by former Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger that extends the space requirements for egg-laying hens to out-of-state suppliers.

In Utah, cities and towns can no longer ban specific dog breeds within their limits. At least 10 cities now have restrictions that ban ownership of breeds such as pit bulls.

CRIME

In California, a "yes means

yes" standard for sex between college students takes effect, requiring "an affirmative, conscious and voluntary agreement to engage in sexual activity," meaning silence or a lack of resistance can no longer be deemed consent.

In Michigan, rape evidence may be better organized and tracked under laws designed to help ensure kits aren't caught in the sort of backlog found when more than 11,000 untested boxes were discovered in a Detroit Police storage facility in 2009.

In Louisiana, law enforcement agencies must provide a tally of the number of untested rape kits on their shelves by Thursday, part of a law that took effect in August.

In Tennessee, ex-felons who have turned their lives around can now receive a certificate of employability, which gives businesses who hire such individuals protection from negligent hiring lawsuits.

DRUG ABUSE

In Michigan, buying cough and cold medicines for the purpose of making methamphetamine will be illegal under another series of measures intended to crack down on meth makers. The laws also prohibit asking someone to buy the ingredients and require state police to add meth offenders to a national database.

ENVIRONMENT

In North Carolina, home sellers will have to disclose whether they know if underground oil and gas rights have been sold.

In New York State, consumers must begin recycling old computers, televisions and video game consoles instead of throwing them in the trash.

lowing complaints about unsafe driving by those who've lost their licenses because of drunken driving arrests or other offenses.

Massachusetts will finally allow "hold open" clips on pumps at self-service gasoline stations, ending motorists' complaints — particularly in winter — about being in one of the few states where the clips weren't allowed.

SOCIAL MEDIA

In New York in February, it becomes illegal to pose for a photo with a lion, tiger or other big cat. The measure, which specifically prohibits contact between members of the public and big cats at animal shows, passed after self-portraits with the animals started becoming more popular online, particularly with some young men on dating sites.

WAGES

The minimum wage goes up Thursday in several states, including Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Ohio, Maryland, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. A wage increase in New York takes effect Wednesday. In addition, troopers in Oklahoma get their first pay raise in seven years.

WEAPONS

In Pennsylvania on Jan. 5, a law takes effect that's designed to give the National Rifle Association, or any gun owner, a better chance at successfully challenging local firearms ordinances in court. In general, Pennsylvania bars its municipalities from enforcing firearms ordinances that are stronger than state law. But the NRA has complained that dozens of local ordinances go unchallenged in Pennsylvania courts by residents who can prove it harmed them.

In California, law enforcement agencies are required to develop policies that encourage officers to search the state's database of gun purchases as part of routine welfare checks. The bill was prompted by sheriff's deputies' failure to detect the danger posed by a man who weeks later embarked on a deadly rampage in May near the University of California, Santa Barbara.

WELFARE

In Tennessee, as part of welfare eligibility, a parent or guardian with a child struggling in a school must attend two or more conferences with the teacher within a year to review the child's status.
