DEAR ABBY

Husband hopes wife is willing to spice up their love life

JEANNE PHILLIPS Advice

Dear Abby: My wife and I have been married for quite a while, and our intimate life became monotonous and unimaginative a long time ago. Over the years I have suggested we try things like role-playing and other non-extreme variations during intimate times. My suggestions were met with rolling eyes and retorts like, "I'm your wife, not a hooker." I finally gave up and try to be content with what we have together.

getting a proposal soon. We are both committed to staying pure before marriage and have not been intimate. My question to you is, do I have to tell him, now or ever, that I have had breast implants? I did it several years ago, and it greatly improved my self-esteem. I'm glad I did it.

Then one evening she surprised me and did one of the things I had suggested. It was very nice and she seemed to like it, too. I didn't know what to say to her. "Thank you" somehow seemed condescending. We have done nothing like it since.

Since he has never felt any breasts, if I tell him, my fear is he will get hung up on the thought, "I wonder what REAL breasts feel like." On the other hand, if I don't tell him and sometime in the future he finds out, he may be like, "I can't believe you kept that from me." What would you advise? — Reticent In Kentucky

I doubt if the answer is in the etiquette books. What should I have said to her to let her know how much I appreciated her loosening up and hope it will perhaps make her more comfortable spicing things up in the future? — Etiquette Advocate In San Diego

Dear Reticent: Many women have breast enhancement surgery so their figures will be more balanced. For the reason you have mentioned, you should tell your boyfriend. It should make no difference to him. However, if it does, it's better that you know now before you spend any more time on someone who measures the worth of a woman by how "real" her breasts are.

Dear Advocate: Praise is a powerful incentive. Flowers would have been nice. But since you didn't send any, try this: Invite your wife out to dinner at a nice restaurant. Tell her how surprised and delighted you were with the special surprise she gave you. A small gift to commemorate the occasion couldn't hurt either.

P.S. If he wants to know what "real" breasts feel like, tell him to go hug his mother.

A satisfying sex life is all about communication, and if my mail is any indicator, if more wives were uninhibited in the bedroom, there would be a lot less business for the "professionals."

Thought For The Day: I'll pass along this pithy sentiment shared with me by former California Gov. Gray Davis. In a commencement speech to students graduating from Columbia Law School, Davis told them: "School is fair. Life is not. Just get used to it."

Dear Abby: I have been dating a wonderful man for two years and am in hopes of

The city has decided to offer for sale the hose houses and fire bells located at the corner of High and Cottonwood streets, at Willow and Bluff and on Lilleth street between Alta and Webb. Since the reorganization of the fire department, these houses have not been used and Fire Chief Bellinger in his annual report recommended their sale. The fire committee has joined in this recommendation and has also recommended that 1000 feet of additional hose be purchased as soon as the city's finances will permit.

expected sometime tonight. A woman from Ontario drove from her city to Pendleton this morning, arriving about 11 and reported rain all the way. She said one-way traffic was in effect at some places east of Pendleton in the Blue Mountains because of water from melting snow running across the highway.

A car crash last November that broke Angela Cabral's neck probably would have killed her 15 years ago. Few people survive a break of the type Cabral suffered, her mother, Lois Cabral, noted, adding that the doctor "said we owe her life to the two EMTs who helped her." When emergency medical technicians Scott Cahill and Dale Termes of the Hermiston Fire Department arrived, they fitted her with a cervical collar and slid a back board under her before she was removed from the wreckage after she was involved in a car accident. Just two months later, Cabral is walking. Her neck is stabilized by a metal halo fastened tightly to her head. The apparatus is awkward, but it allows her to walk and she has hope of being completely well in three to six months.

Rivers and creeks of Umatilla County are on the rise again today and county officials fear a replay of the Christmas week floods. Virtually all the tributaries of the Umatilla River were flooding today, and the rush of water through Pendleton was nearly as high this morning as it was during the holiday floods, according to the local station of the U.S. Weather Bureau. A crest here was
