Pope walks in Ash Wednesday procession in Rome

ROME (AP) — Pope Francis walked in a solemn Ash Wednesday procession between churches on Rome's ancient Aventine Hill, calling on people to humbly remember their human limits as faithful began their annual penitential Lenten period.

Francis, carrying his pastoral staff, chanted prayers along with other participants during the few minutes' walk down the street. He wore a purple cloak, in keeping with the somber Lenten mood as Catholics spiritually prepare for Easter, which falls on April 5 this year.

The pope lowered his head so a prelate could dab ashes on his head during the ceremony inside St. Sabina's Basilica, a church that dates to the early 5th century. The ashes symbolize mortality.

Then Francis, along with other churchmen, sprinkled ashes on the foreheads of other faithful, motioning the sign of the cross with their fingers as they did so.

The ritual of the ashes was a "reminder of the truth of human existence," Francis said in his homily. "We are limited creatures, sinners always in need of penitence and conversion."

Almsgiving, prayer and fasting are traditional ways to mark Lent. Francis encouraged church hierarchy, starting with himself, to be humble enough to cry, so that their prayer will be "ever more authentic and without hypocrisy."

Holy Week ceremonies, beginning with Palm Sunday on March 29, are expected to draw huge crowds of tourists and pilgrims to Rome and the Vatican. They include the Good Friday evening Way of the Cross torch-lit procession at the Colosseum.

Some churches offer drive-by ashes

UPPER ARLINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Too busy to stop in for an Ash Wednesday service? Some churches are offering drive-by ashes.

Clergy at Advent Evangelical Lutheran Church in Upper Arlington, Ohio, applied ash to the foreheads of anyone who stopped in the parking lot of the church for two hours Wednesday.

It's the first time the church offered the drive-by service, said the Rev. Aaron Layne. The congregation supported it, he told The Columbus Dispatch, although some comments on Facebook criticized him for cheapening the observance that marks the beginning of Lent for Christians.

Layne reasoned that it could be a first step back for some people who haven't been to church in years.

Other churches have also taken more informal approaches to Ash Wednesday. The "Ashes to Go" movement began in 2007 with ashes given to some 100 passers-by outside a coffeehouse in Missouri, the Rev. Teresa K.M. Danieley of St.

John's Episcopal Church in St. Louis wrote on the "Ashes to Go" website.

The practice has since spread, and the website lists quick ash distribution services in more than 30 states and in several countries.

St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Ashtabula, Ohio, planned to offer ashes at a downtown park Wednesday, The Star-Beacon in Ashtabula reported. Like Advent Evangelical Lutheran Church, the service would be a first for the northeast Ohio church.

Both churches also planned traditional evening services with ash distribution.
