

SHOOTING: Last Hermiston homicide was Jan. 9, 2012

know at this time if what was used to kill Madrigal.

Edmiston said the major crime team, comprised of law enforcement officials from several Umatilla and Morrow County agencies, is investigating the homicide. Primus said he would expect investigators to try and find out if Wednesday night’s shooting was related to other recent shootings.

The night of Jan. 22, a 21-year-old Umatilla man was shot and another 22-year-old man suffered a head injury in a fight at the Foxwood Apartments, which is a quarter mile south on 11th Street. And a 23-year-old man was shot the night of Feb. 13 near Chinook and John Day streets in Umatilla.

Edmiston said there are no updates on the Foxwood case, and at this point there is no evidence that the incident and Wednesday’s shooting are connected. Police have not arrested shooting suspects in either case.

The last homicide in Hermiston was Jan. 9, 2012, when Salvador Valencia, 22, was shot dead outside the Gotta Stop Mini Mart, 1580 W. Highland Ave. — less than a mile from 11th Street Market: after a fight broke out. The Umatilla County District Attorney’s Office obtained one conviction in that case — Xavier Coria Ortiz, 19 at the time, pleaded guilty to riot, a class C felony.

JORDAN: Placed two employees on paid administrative leave that the incoming governor did not plan to make any immediate staffing changes.

“Brian made clear their focus is to make this transition as stable and orderly as possible, while acknowledging there are many things consuming their attention at the moment,” Jordan wrote in an email to agency directors. “In the spirit of stability, the incoming Governor is not planning to make any immediate leadership changes within agencies. Under normal circumstances a gubernatorial transition is complex, and they understand the condensed timeframe we are working within.”

Jordan sent the email shortly before Brown took the oath of office on Feb. 18.

Jordan faced increasing questions in recent weeks after someone apparently leaked Kitzhaber’s personal emails to the Willamette Week newspaper and Jordan asked the Oregon State Police to investigate.

Jordan also placed two employees at the agency on paid administrative leave.

The emails are stored on computer servers at the state data center, which

“We are committed to continuing with the Enterprise Leadership Team and related collaborative initiatives begun under Mr. Jordan’s leadership.”
— Gov. Kate Brown

Jordan manages as director of the Department of Administrative Services. Kitzhaber’s staff contacted employees at the center on Feb. 5 to request that the emails be deleted from the archive.

Several employees at the data center had rejected a request by a Kitzhaber administration staffer to delete the governor’s personal emails from state computers. Managers declined to delete the emails, but provided a copy of them to the Kitzhaber administration.

Jordan reportedly initiated the investigation on his own authority the morning Kitzhaber resigned, but before Brown assumed office. She was not consulted.

In light of Brown’s promise in her inaugural address to make government more transparent, critics questioned whether the administration was punishing whistleblowers.

A spokeswoman for Brown did not respond to questions about Jordan’s resignation on Thursday.

Brown appointed state chief financial officer George Naughton to serve as acting director of the agency until the governor selects a permanent replacement.

“We are committed to continuing with the Enterprise Leadership Team and related collaborative initiatives begun under Mr. Jordan’s leadership,” Brown said in a written statement. “We are grateful for his years of service to the people of Oregon and the community of state government.”

From 1989 to 1999, Jordan was the city administrator for Canby. He was a Clackamas County commissioner from 1999 to 2003, then took a job as chief operating officer at Metro, the Portland regional government in 2003. Jordan remained at Metro until Kitzhaber appointed him as the state’s chief operating officer in 2011.
