

DOUBLE FEATURE

SKATEBOARD NATION SMITHSONIAN CHANNEL

Get stoked for a high-flying, adrenaline-fueled adventure. Explore the underground movement that's helping Native American youth throughout the U.S. soar above life's challenges, one halfpipe at a time. Skateboarding is increasingly popular on Indian reservations, cultivating athletes, artists, entrepreneurs and mentors. From the streets of Albuquerque to New York City, from Washington, D.C., to Pine Ridge, SD, the sport is fueling a new form of self-expression and pride.

CONCRETE POW WOW PRODUCED BY FUEL TV

This short documentary chronicles the Native American skateboarding scene mostly at the 2010 All Nations Skate Jam in Albuquerque, NM. It features interviews with skate contestants and invited pros, and a few still photos that provide a historical visual of some of the early skateboarding days on an Indian Reservation.
(2012 | 22 minutes)

Presented by the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation.
