Writers' series welcomes 3 poets

PENDLETON — In recognition of National Poetry Month, the First Draft Writers' Series will feature three award-winning poets.

Christianne Balk, Alice Derry and Katharine Whitcomb are featured in "A Sense of Place: The Washington State Geospatial Poetry Anthology." The trio will read from their works Thursday at 7 p.m. at Pendleton Center for the Arts, 214 N. Main St. The free event is open to the public.

For the online anthology, Whitcomb said, "We chose poems that evoked the atmosphere of place; the air, the water or lack of water, the smells, the sounds, the dirt, rocks, interiors, landscapes, landmarks, heritage and history of places in Washington. These poems take place on mountain tops, in backyards, on the reservation, on the highway, in a bookstore, in a river."

Balk's poems have appeared in journals including The New Yorker, the New Republic and Atlantic. Derry has taught for 29 years at Peninsula College in Port Angeles, Washington, and Whitcomb is coordinator of the writing specialization English major at Central Washington University in Ellensburg, Washington.

After the featured guests, an open mic time is available for up to 10 local writers to share samples of their original work.
