PUBLIC SAFETY LOG

THURSDAY

- An Irrigon resident on Washington Lane at 8:04 a.m. reported a husky-type dog killed all of his chickens.
- A sports utility vehicle at 8:34 a.m. crashed into the side of the Irrigon Shell station. A caller said there was lots of damage and the vehicle leaked fluids, but the air bags did not open. The Morrow County Sheriff's Office took a report.
- A Pendleton woman on Southwest Isaac Avenue at 8:35 a.m. asked to speak to an officer because her yard floods whenever the neighbor waters their yard. The caller also said she spent $4,000 installing a wall and patio and the water is damaging it.
- A Umatilla resident at 8:51 a.m. told police her boyfriend on Thursday shoved her head through glass and choked her.
- A passenger car at about 10:15 a.m. crashed into the rear of a semi tractor on Bombing Range Road, Boardman. Multiple agencies responded, and emergency workers freed one person from the car. An ambulance took the person to Good Shepherd Medical Center, Hermiston.
- An Echo resident at 12:19 p.m. reported a man she knows took photos of her house while he was in the street and not on her property. She asked police what she could do about it.
- A man with his pants hanging down caused a disturbance outside fuel stations in Boardman. A caller at 1:26 p.m. reported the man tried to buy beer and was at the Sinclair station before walking to the nearby Chevron station. The caller said the man was white, wore a gray shirt and khaki pants "hanging down very low," and he had a dog. Boardman police contacted the man and gave him a ride to Space Age Fuel, 77522 Highway 207, Hermiston.
- A Hermiston-area caller at 1:33 p.m. reported on Monday night two dogs came to her residence on Klaus Road and killed about 20 of her laying hens.
- The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office at 2:02 p.m. received a call that residents on Sandpiper Lane, Hermiston, are raising roosters for cock fighting. The case is under investigation.
- A man at about 2:30 p.m. caused a disturbance at Space Age Fuel, 77522 Highway 207, Hermiston. The man bothered customers for money and yelled and swore at an employee who told him to leave. The employee reported the man wore a short sleeve T-shirt and had a pit bull dog with him.
- There was no indication this was the person who caused a disturbance at service stations in Boardman.
- An employee of Abby's Legendary Pizza, Pendleton, told police at 3:22 p.m. a woman called and reported she received a call at 2 a.m. from someone claiming to deliver pizza. The woman also told the employee the phone number that called, and the employee tracked that to a person's name. The employee told police she wanted this logged in case similar calls come in.
- A Stanfield officer at 6:10 p.m. received information about a break-in at Echo High School, 600 E. Gerone St., Echo. The incident is under investigation.
- Pendleton police at 4:11 p.m. received a call about a dog locked in a tan Honda Odyssey at the Walmart Parking lot, Pendleton.
- Two boys at about 7:15 p.m. used a slingshot to try and hit animals and cars at Sherwood Park on Southwest 29th Street, Pendleton. A caller said one boy looked about 9 and the other 13, and they hit her dog with a rock. Police did not find the rude duo.

ARRESTS, CITATIONS

Thursday

- Hermiston police arrested Crisanto Crispin Guzman Garcia, 40, no address provided, for strangulation and harassment.
- Pendleton police arrested Lonnie Lynn Abbot, 40, of Pendleton, for first-degree trespassing and possession of methamphetamine.
- Umatilla tribal police arrested James Hector Freeman Estrada, 24, no address provided, for possession of methamphetamine.

Friday

- Oregon State Police arrested John Richard Ledoux, 62, of Heppner, for driving under the influence of intoxicants. State police reported he has slurred speech and glassy eyes when a trooper talked to him and a blood alcohol level of .13 percent, above the .08 percent legal limit.

Second person dies from I-84 traffic crash

East Oregonian

A second person has died from a traffic crash April 26 on Interstate 84 near Meacham.

Bryan Yeager, 53, of Elgin, was initially flown to Kadlec Regional Medical Center in Richland with critical injuries and later transferred to Oregon Health and Science University in Portland. Yeager died May 4 at OHSU.

Yeager was a passenger in the vehicle driven by Steven Gardner, 60, of Cove, who crashed at about 2:13 a.m. on the interstate at mile post 238. According to Oregon State Police, the vehicle was traveling east-bound when it lost control and went across the median, striking a guardrail and rolling onto its top.

Gardner was pronounced dead at the scene. The cause of the wreck is still under investigation by the OSP Pendleton Area Command.

Hermiston gathers local feedback on landscaping ordinance

By JADE MCDOWELL
East Oregonian

A proposed ordinance working its way to the Hermiston City Council would require all new commercial, industrial and multi-family residential development to be landscaped in a way that meets the city's approval.

The ordinance leaves the exact design up to developers, broadly requiring "a combination of deciduous and evergreen trees, shrubs and ground covers." But it does require that developers landscape a certain percentage of their property and get the plans approved through the granting of a city landscape permit.

At an open house Thursday night Hermiston resident Kathy Erz said the ordinance would unfairly burden business owners with extra costs to water, mow, trim, weed and otherwise maintain the landscaping.

I understand people want a beautiful city. I do," she said. "I've lived here all my life. But you can't force it."

Stacey Stanek agreed. She said as the city increased water and electricity costs, requiring business owners and property managers to put in plants and decorative lighting could end up being a deterrent to development.

"It's just another cost on business owners," she said.

City planner Clint Spencer said the ordinance was originally developed by the Community Enhancement Committee at the request of the city council. As part of its mandate to increase Hermiston's beautification and livability the committee came up with a list of rules it would like to see implemented. The list was then passed on to the planning commission for development as a land use ordinance.

Assistant city manager Mark Morgan said the

"I understand people want a beautiful city. I do. I've lived here all my life. But you can't force it."

— Kathy Erz,
Hermiston resident

next step would be for city staff to take the ordinance, along with public feedback, to the city council, probably in June.

"They're the ones who asked for it," he said.

The council would go through an official public hearing process before voting on the ordinance.

As written, the rules require 15 percent of the site of a new multi-family residence to be landscaped, 3 percent of the site in a central commercial zone, six percent of the site in an outlying commercial zone and three percent of the developed area of an industrial zone development.

Sites in the downtown commercial overlay have more flexibility and are allowed to use decorative lighting, benches and other features where planting grass or trees isn't feasible.

In other zones, however, plants must make up the majority of the landscaping and developers must submit a plan for irrigation of plants that are not drought-tolerant.

To go along with the ordinance the city has also developed a set of guidelines with suggests the types of plants, ground cover and designs that work best for the area.

The full text of the ordinance can be found online at www.hermiston.or.us/landscaping-ordinance-draft.
