

Stewart bids ‘Daily Show’ farewell with Colbert, Springsteen

NEW YORK (AP) — Jon Stewart said goodbye to “The Daily Show” on Thursday, America’s foremost satirist of politicians and the media ushered out with a reunion of the many colleagues that he worked with during 16 years as host.

“Guess what? Stewart said at the show’s opening. “I’ve got big news. This is it.”

He began by pretending to report on Thursday’s Republican presidential debate — which actually happened after the taping — but said he didn’t have enough remaining correspondents to talk about all the candidates. There followed a long succession of personalities, like Aasif Mandvi, John Hodgman, Steve Carell and more, who had gotten their starts at Comedy Central.

He’d been away from the show for more than a decade, but Carell said that “becoming an international superstar is just something I did while awaiting my next assignment.”

Stewart, 52, announced last winter that he was getting restless and it was time to move on. Trevor Noah replaces him as host next month.

Armed with a razor-sharp wit and research team adept at finding video evidence of hypocrisy or unintentional comedy among the nation’s establishment, Stewart turned a sleepy basic-cable entertainment show into a powerful cultural platform. Those who scored a ticket to the 6 p.m. taping were sworn to secrecy.

“From start to finish, it was fantastic,” said audience member Randy Gunnell, 29, of Westchester, New York. “It was emotional, people crying all over the place.”

Stephen Colbert. And Bruce Springsteen, who’s appeared on the show multiple times, played a set.

Stewart had spent years skewering the nation’s establishment, but had turned the spotlight on himself during his penultimate show Wednesday, noting how institutions he had supposedly eviscerated were stronger than ever.

“The world is demonstrably worse than when I started,” Stewart wailed. “Have I caused this?”

Fellow comic Louis C.K., his guest Wednesday, noted that Stewart was able to keep his show fresh and funny for a long time, keeping up with the world’s changes. “It really is one of the great comedy accomplishments of all time,” he said.

A line of people hoping to get in to the taping gathered outside of the Comedy Central studio on Manhattan’s far West Side. First in line was Chad Lance, a 27-year-old musician from Philadelphia who said he arrived at 2:30 a.m., who said he couldn’t wait to see what happened.

“No one knows who’s going to come, no one knows what’s going to happen,” he said. “I think this is going to be one of the most exciting TV tapings ever.”

Jessica Vitovitch, 21, was anxiously waiting to see if she’d get a seat.

“I think Stewart has contributed so much to the political consciousness, especially ... my generation,” she said. “For this to be his finale, it’s a huge cultural moment.”

Stewart’s fans will be forced to navigate the first presidential election since 1996 without his commentary, a loss that felt particularly acute with Thursday’s GOP debate.

Fox News Channel chairman Roger Ailes, whose network remained intact despite Stewart’s “pulverizing” blows, said that Stewart was a brilliant comedian and nice guy who has a bitter view of the world.

“He’s been after us for years,” Ailes told The Hollywood Reporter. “Occasionally we pay attention. We think he’s funny. We never took it seriously and he never made a dent in us.”

With thousands of words in tributes being written on his behalf the past few weeks, Stewart hasn’t granted exit interviews.
