Subway's Jared to admit to child-porn charges

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Longtime Subway pitchman Jared Fogle is expected to plead guilty to child-pornography charges, an Indiana television station reported Tuesday.

The report on Fox59 comes six weeks after authorities seized electronics and other items from Fogle's home in Zionsville, an affluent Indianapolis suburb.

Citing sources it did not identify, the station said Fogle would enter a plea Wednesday. It also said the U.S. Attorney's Office in Indianapolis planned to hold a news conference Wednesday.

The 37-year-old Fogle became a Subway pitchman more than 15 years ago after shedding more than 200 pounds as a college student, in part by eating the chain's sandwiches.

Subway suspended its association with Fogle after the raid. The company declined to comment Tuesday, saying only that the chain had "already ended our relationship with Jared."

Ron Elberger, an Indianapolis attorney who represents Fogle, and Tim Harty, a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Indianapolis, both declined to comment on the report.

Two months before Fogle's home was raided, authorities arrested the then-executive director of Fogle's foundation on child-porn charges. Russell Taylor, 43, ran the Jared Foundation, which sought to raise awareness about childhood obesity. He was charged with seven counts of production of child pornography and one count of possession of child pornography.

Two become first females to pass Army Ranger School

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two women have passed the Army's Ranger School, becoming the first females to complete the grueling combat training program and earn the right to wear Ranger tabs on their uniforms.

The Army's Ranger headquarters in Fort Benning, Georgia, says the women and 94 men passed the tough 62-day course that tests their ability to overcome fatigue, hunger and stress during combat operations.

While completing the leadership course lets the two women wear the coveted Ranger black-and-gold tab, it does not let them become members of the Ranger regiment. Neither woman has been identified by the military.

Allowing women to participate in the Ranger course is part of the U.S. military's push to open more combat jobs to women. But the toughest jobs remain closed to female soldiers — including infantry, armor and special operations positions. That includes the 75th Ranger Regiment, which requires additional schooling that is physically and mentally challenging before soldiers can join.

Still, former Army officers such as Sue Fulton, who in 1980 was among the first women to graduate from the

her full potential."

"We owe soldiers the opportunity to serve successfully in any position where they are qualified and capable," he added.

The 62-day Ranger school includes three phases, each in a different part of the country: wooded areas of Fort Benning, the Appalachian mountains of north Georgia, and swamps in Florida.

The first 20 days of Ranger school focus on military skills and endurance. Then, the mountain phase near Dahlonega, Georgia, includes more small-unit operations and survival techniques. The final so-called swamp phase takes place in Florida and includes airborne assault, amphibious operations and extreme mental and physical stress.

Female soldiers were held to the same physical standards as men. That included passing a fitness test of 49 push-ups, 59 sit-ups, six chin-ups and finishing a 5-mile run in 40 minutes. Graduates also had to perform a 12-mile foot march in three hours, complete three parachute jumps and four air assaults on helicopters as well as endure 27 days of mock combat patrols.

Oregon unemployment rate rises despite strong jobs report

PORTLAND (AP) — Oregon posted another month of strong job growth, and the brisk hiring pace might be giving workers the confidence to quit their jobs in search of a better one.

The state added 4,600 jobs last month, the Oregon Employment Department said Tuesday. It's a typical gain during a 12-month span that has seen payroll employment increase by about 56,000 jobs.

"Some of the growth is related to in-migration," said David Cooke, a state economist. "More people are moving to Oregon than are moving out of Oregon, and many people are moving from California as shown by the data for drivers' licenses surrendered."

Despite the strong jobs report, the unemployment rate jumped to 5.9 percent in July from 5.5 percent in June. The rate was 7 percent in July 2014.

Rather than layoffs, state employment economist Nick Beleiciks attributed much of the increase to people entering the labor market or voluntarily leaving their jobs. "Oregon's economy is adding jobs so fast right now that many of them will find work quickly," he said.

Job growth for July was strong in many industries, particularly construction, retail trade and professional and business services. The biggest laggard was government — down even more than expected at the end of the school year.

An enduring story since the end of the recession is that jobs have returned but pay raises have not. State figures, however, show wage inflation accelerating a bit. The average hourly wage for private sector payroll employees was $23.31 in July, up 2.4 percent from $22.77 a year earlier. In recent years, the norm for Oregon workers has been about 2 percent.
