Dispensary fined for handing out product in parking lot

PORTLAND (AP) — A Portland dispensary is out $2,500 after the state fined the establishment for allowing a vendor to give away marijuana concentrates and pre-rolled joints in the parking lot on the opening day of recreational marijuana sales.
The fine against Cannacea is the first disciplinary action against a dispensary since recreational sales began Oct. 1.
According to a stipulated settlement order, the dispensary allowed marijuana products to be given away in its parking lot and that Cannacea failed to check the identification of people receiving the swag to be sure they were 21 or older or that they were medical marijuana patients.
A bulletin sent to all dispensaries on Oct. 2 informed owners that giveaways and free samples of any marijuana inside or outside the store is prohibited.
Tisha Siler, who was cited as the one responsible for the store, paid the fine in full.

Medical school opens rural campus in Klamath Falls

KLAMATH FALLS (AP) — An Oregon university devoted to bringing high quality medicine to rural areas recently opened its second rural campus "hub" site.
The Herald and News reports that Oregon Health & Science University officially opened of its Rural Campus Academic Headquarters in Klamath Falls Monday. The first hub is in Coos Bay.
The campuses are meant to make it easier for rural Oregon communities to recruit physicians, pharmacists, dentists and other health care providers.
Klamath Falls Regional Associate Dean Dr. Joyce Hollander-Rodriguez says students will be more likely to return to rural areas to practice if they have been exposed to the region while learning the profession.
Six students started the Klamath Falls program last month.
University officials say they may consider a third hub in northeast Oregon in the future.
