National groups to oppose laws allowing guns on campuses

CITY, Iowa Four national groups representing college educators and trustees said Thursday they would fight a growing push in state legislatures to allow people to carry concealed guns on campuses.

The groups also called for the repeal of measures in several states that already allow for so-called campus carry, arguing that academic institutions should remain "as safe and weapon-free as possible for students, faculty, staff, parents and community members.'

"Colleges and universities closely control firearms and prohibit concealed guns on their campuses because they regard the presence of weapons as incompatible with their educational missions," said the statement, signed by the American Association of University Professors, the American Federation of Teachers, the Association of American Colleges and Universities and the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges.

The groups said students and professors wouldn't be comfortable discussing controversial subjects if they thought there might be a gun in the room. "College campuses are marketplaces of ideas, and a rigorous academic exchange of ideas may be chilled by the presence of weapons," they said.

Supporters such as the National Rifle Association argue that lawful gun owners should be allowed to carry on campuses for self-protection. They argue that having more law-abiding citizens with guns could potentially deter mass shootings or allow bystanders to intervene to limit the consequences.

The statement from the four groups comes amid intensifying debate over how to prevent gun violence on campuses, following last month's shooting at Umpqua College. Community Lawmakers in Florida are considering plans to allow concealed permit owners to bring their guns onto campus, and several other states are expected to consider similar legislation next year.

Texas recently the eighth state to allow the carrying of concealed weapons on campuses, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. The change goes into effect next year, and colleges are considering how to implement it. The law contains a key concession for opponents, giving adminis-trators the ability to mark off certain areas as gun-free.

Seven other states Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Mississippi, Oregon, Utah and Wisconsin — now have laws or court rulings allowing the carrying of concealed weapons on some campuses, according to the NCSL.

The higher education groups rejected the argument that more guns could deter mass shootings.

Container traffic to resume at Lewiston port

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) Officials say container traffic at the Port of Lewiston in northern Idaho will resume after being suspended for nearly six months.

The Lewiston Tribune reports that port officials announced Wednesday that the Northwest Container Services and transport company Tidewater will begin using a new route in December.

In April, container traffic came to a halt after shipper Hapag-Lloyd stopped calling on the Port of Portland because of a lack of overseas steamships.

The new route will go by barge to the Port of Morrow in eastern Oregon. Container will then shift to rail to travel to western Washington, which will allow exports to be transferred to ocean-going ships just like they would have been had they gone through the Port of Portland.

BRIEFLY

"Just having another option is going to be tremendously helpful," said ort of Lewiston Manager David Doeringsfeld. "There aren't enough trucks to get product to the Puget Sound in a timely manner."

The port — which is Idaho's only seaport mostly handles dried peas and lentils.

The alternative journey will start off small, with only 18 to 20 containers making trips every other week. The former route saw 80 to 100 containers being placed on barges four times a month.

Eventually, the new route is expected to move the same amount of containers as when products moved through Portland, Doeringsfeld said. However, officials aren't giving up hope on being able to go through Portland sometime in the future. But those talks are currently focused on the relationship between union labor and management, as well the volume of containers going down the river.

Lane County commissioner to run for U.S. Senate

PORTLAND (AP) — Faye Stewart, a county commissioner in Oregon, announced Thursday that he will seek the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate.

The Lane County commissioner will try to win the May primary and oust Democratic incumbent Ron Wyden, who is heavily favored to win the general election. Republicans have not won a statewide race in Oregon since 2002.

Stewart said he is running because "our citizens are broken, and they need help." He said the federal government has neglected the needs of Oregon while running up debt and mishandling natural resources.

Stewart, 48, of Cottage Grove, is a member of the family that owned the Bohemia Lumber Co. during the 20th century. His great uncle was a former state representative.
