DEAR ABBY

Moving to the desert makes woman thirst for former life

Dear Abby: Last year my boyfriend and I moved across the country to Arizona so he could be closer to his friends and family. My entire family lives on the East Coast.

JEANNE PHILLIPS Advice

I don't believe she has the right to ask for the necklace. Does she? — Blue In Tennessee

Dear Blue: Because you are no longer speaking, I can understand why your sister might want her son's ashes back. Be a lady; return the necklace to her via registered mail or have your stepmother give it to her.

Recently it seems like our plan to marry and start a family keeps getting pushed further and further into the future. I'm 35; he's 47. Neither of us has been married or has kids.

I'm beginning to regret having uprooted my life for someone who is unilaterally changing the timing of what I thought we both wanted.

Dear Alone: If you haven't already, it's time to have a conversation with your boyfriend about what your expectations were when you made the move to Arizona.

Ask him why he wants to postpone your wedding plans beyond what you had agreed upon. He may have cold feet, his friends or relatives may have said they don't care for you — anything is possible.

Dear Abby: Seven years ago my sister's 19-year-old son was killed in a car accident. After the wake she gave me a heart necklace with some of his ashes.

Well, did I get a shock today. I received an email from her asking for it back! She even had my stepmom repeat that message to me.
