Weather delays recovery of climber's body

By STEVEN DUBOIS
Associated Press

PORTLAND — Efforts to recover the body of a climber who died after falling into a crevasse were temporarily halted Monday because of severe weather on Mount Jefferson in Oregon, authorities said.

Searchers were descending to a lower elevation to be airlifted off of the mountain by helicopter. They planned to reassess on Tuesday whether the body of Tommy Fountain can be safely recovered.

Fountain, 32, fell Sunday while climbing with his wife at an elevation of 8,800 feet. She spent the night on the mountain, texting with rescuers who found her in good condition.

Searchers could not reach the couple until Monday because of the difficult terrain, said Lt. Chris Baldrige of the Marion County Sheriff's Office.

"We do not know when he died," Baldrige said. "All we knew is that he had fallen and was injured."

Fountain's wife, 29-year-old Alison Fountain, did not fall. Crews helped her off the mountain, and she was met by relatives.

At nearly 10,500 feet, Mount Jefferson is the second-highest peak in Oregon, behind Mount Hood. Part of the Cascade Range, it is northwest of Bend and in a wilderness destination popular among climbers, campers, hikers, anglers and cyclists.

The couple's vehicle was found Sunday on a trailhead in Marion County. Five climbers from Corvallis Mountain Rescue were dropped off overnight about 2,000 feet below the site where Fountain fell. Additional rescuers joined them before dawn.

Alison Fountain's Facebook page indicates she works as a flight nurse in Corvallis and also has experience as an emergency room nurse. Photos on Tommy Fountain's Facebook page show he was an avid climber.

The sheriff's office did not immediately identify a hometown for the couple, but public records list their most recent address in McMinnville — 40 miles southwest of Portland.

Litter piles up after Douglas County adds dump fee

ROSEBURG (AP) — Woodlands and forests around Oregon's Douglas County have been accumulating piles of garbage since the region started charging for trash disposal at the dump.

The county has seen a 65 percent increase in littering calls since implementing a $3-per-can fee at the dump, reported The News-Review. The Douglas County Sheriff's Office has responded to 71 litter-related calls since July 1, up from 43 calls during the same time period in 2014.

"It's a problem," said Rick Held. He's timber deputy with the sheriff's office and patrols the forests while contracted out to the Bureau of Land Management and Douglas Timber Operators.

"It's such an eyesore, and when people dump trash, they'll dump five or six garbage bags and then within a few days, the animals will get into the bags and the trash will get strewn everywhere and it makes a giant mess."

Even without seeing the data, Held said he's noticed an increase in the number of locations where people are dumping garbage.

In early November, deputies got a report about a large dump on a Seneca-Jones landing. They found mail belonging to a residence in Sutherlin, and the residents told them they paid their neighbor to take the garbage to the dump.

But the neighbor told deputies he chucked the trash in the woods when he realized he didn't have enough money for the dump fee after refueling his truck.

Cyber Monday sales still up, but losing luster

By MAE ANDERSON
AP Technology Writer

NEW YORK — Shoppers traded bricks for clicks on Monday, flocking online to snap up "Cyber Monday" deals on everything from cashmere sweaters to Star Wars toys.

Now that shoppers are online all the time anyway, the 10-year-old shopping holiday has lost some of its luster as online sales on Thanksgiving and Black Friday pick up. But enough shoppers have been trained to look for "Cyber Monday" specific sales to ensure the holiday will still mean big bucks for retailers.

It's too early for sales figures, but Monday is still expected to be the biggest online shopping day ever, likely racking up more than $3 billion in sales, according to research firm comScore.

As of 7 p.m. Monday, Adobe estimated Cyber Monday sales would rise 12 percent to $2.98 billion by the end of the day. A more complete picture of Cyber Monday sales will be available when comScore releases figures on Wednesday.

"A lot of people wait to see if deals are better on Cyber Monday," said Forrester Research analyst Sucharita Mulpuru.

Workers gather Monday in a section packed high with merchandise at Amazon.com's fulfillment center in DuPont, Wash.

New Yorker Anna Osgoodby was one of the many online shoppers who spread her purchases throughout the holiday shopping weekend. On Black Friday, she took advantage of a 35 percent sale at online accessories retailer ashand-willow.com, buying earrings, a necklace and bracelet. Then she bought earrings and clutches on Monday during its 40 percent off sale.

"That extra 5 percent convinced me to buy a few more," she said.

Some hot sellers were in scarce supply by early afternoon on Monday. At Target, a Swagway hoverboard was sold out by early afternoon. The electronic transportation gadget had been $100 off at $399. Drones and some Star Wars toys were hard to find as well.

"There are certain hot products, hoverboards seem to be a phenomenon, they're selling out everywhere," said Scot Wingo, chairman of ChannelAdvisor, which provides e-commerce services to retailers.

Adobe found 13 out of 100 product views returned an out-of-stock message as of 7 p.m., twice the normal rate. And there were a few brief outages at sites like Neiman Marcus and Target and online payments company PayPal reported a brief interruption in service.

Retailers have been touting online deals since the beginning of November. And they no longer wait for Monday to roll out Cyber Monday deals, either. Amazon started "Lightning Deals" on Saturday and Wal-Mart beginning all of its Cyber offers on 8 p.m. on Sunday.

"It's no longer about one day, but a season of digital deals," said Matthew Shay, president of retail trade group The National Retail Federation.

That seems to have taken a toll on brick-and-mortar shopping. Frenzied crowds seemed to be a thing of the past on Black Friday — the busy shopping day after Thanksgiving — and sales fell to $10.4 billion this year, down from $11.6 billion in 2014, according to preliminary figures from research firm ShopperTrak.
