

California issues 605,000 driver's licenses to immigrants

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California issued more than a half-million driver's licenses under a new law granting the identifying documents to immigrants who may be in the country illegally.

The Department of Motor Vehicles announced Wednesday that 605,000 licenses were issued since AB60 took effect last January. That's out of 830,000 applications.

AB60 allows people who can't prove they're in the country legally to obtain driver's licenses using identification from their home countries.

They also must prove California residency and pass written and driving tests.

Supporters pushed for the law as a safety measure, arguing that many immigrants already get behind the wheel but lack the training and testing required of other drivers and may not carry insurance.

Condemnation, doubt greet North Korea's H-bomb announcement

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea's declaration that it had tested a hydrogen bomb for the first time was greeted with widespread condemnation — but also skepticism — as world powers vowed Wednesday to punish the impoverished and defiant nation with new international sanctions.

The isolated country's fourth nuclear test since 2006 was a "reckless challenge to international norms of behavior and the authority of the U.N. Security Council," said British Ambassador Matthew Rycroft.

The council met in an emergency session and called the test "a clear violation" of its resolutions. It agreed to start work immediately on a resolution for new sanctions.

The international community must respond with "steadily increasing pressure" and rigorous enforcement of existing measures, said U.S. Ambassador Samantha Power.

Four rounds of U.N. sanctions have aimed at reining in the North's nuclear and missile development, but Pyongyang has ignored them and moved ahead with programs to modernize its ballistic missiles and nuclear weapons.

Cologne divided over who to blame for New Year's assaults

COLOGNE, Germany (AP) — Amid widespread shock over a string of sexual assaults in this cosmopolitan German city on New Year's Eve, the response was divided Wednesday: blame the police or chide the victims, deport criminal foreigners or prevent migrants from entering the country in the first place.

The reaction in Cologne reflects a broader debate as Germany struggles to reconcile law and order with its new-found role as a haven for those seeking a better life.

Police descriptions of the perpetrators as of "Arab or North African origin" were seized on by those calling for an end to Chancellor Angela Merkel's open-door policy toward people fleeing violence and persecution — even as authorities warned they don't know if any of the culprits are refugees.

Adding to the controversy were remarks by Cologne's mayor, Henriette Reker, suggesting that women can protect themselves from strange men on the streets by keeping them "more than an arm's length" away — words that were widely ridiculed on social media Wednesday for putting the onus on the victims.

At least 106 women have come forward to file criminal complaints of sexual assault and robbery during the New Year's Eve festivities, authorities said, including two accounts of rape.

LA tries to cope with rain in a place where rain is rare

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When it rains in Los Angeles, the hardest thing to find can often be an umbrella.

Those who own one can't remember where they put it, and stores quickly see their stocks cleared out.

So while this week's El Niño-triggered storms have brought welcome rain — too much of it in some places — they have created the usual angst among a population more used to greeting each day with sunglasses.

"People in Los Angeles are always unprepared, even when they know it's going to rain," Morana Mendez said with a smile and a shake of her head as she looked at an empty bin in her convenience store that just hours before had been filled with umbrellas. A similar bin at a downtown store across the street was also empty.

"Even my co-worker, she came to work this morning without an umbrella," Mendez added.
