Seaside officer honored at memorial

SEASIDE People gathered with flags and flowers on Friday to remember an officer slain while on duty last week in Seaside, Oregon.

The memorial service was held in Seaside for 39-year-old police Sgt. Jason Goodding, who joined the resort town's police department in 2003.

"This profession is a brotherhood and a family, and we want to give him and the community the best send-off we possibly can," Benton County Sheriff's Office Detective Sgt. David Peterson said.

At the service, Oregon Gov. Kate Brown presented Goodding's wife, Amy, with the state's Medal of Ultimate Sacrifice, awarded to Good-ding posthumously.

The medal may be awarded to families of law enforcement officers who died while performing their duties or were killed because of their employment as law enforcement officers, according to state law.

Goodding was shot to death as he was serving a felony arrest warrant on the night of Feb. 5. The 55-year-old suspect, who was shot by another officer, also died.

When the man, identified as Phillip Ferry of Seaside, wouldn't show his hands, the other officer used a Taser on him, Clatsop County District Attorney Josh Marquis said. While the Taser seemed to incapacitate Ferry, "it didn't do much more," he said.

The suspect went down on the ground. When Goodding tried to subdue him, Ferry Seaside is a town of about 6,500 people on the northern Oregon coast. It is about 80 miles west of Portland.

FBI: No rigged explosives found at site of standoff

BURNS (AP) — FBI officials said Friday they haven't found any rigged explosives or booby traps at the national wildlife refuge in Oregon that had been seized by an armed group.

Authorities allowed a group of reporters to get closer to the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge, where the last four occupiers surrendered Thursday. The tour stopped short of the refuge itself.

The armed protesters had blockaded the road near the refuge using a government-owned heavy front-end loader and two pickup trucks. A group of tents and pickup trucks was clustered on a small rise far beyond the road barrier. Larry Karl, the assistant special agent in charge of the Portland FBI, said the tents made up the "shantytown" where the last four holdouts at the refuge spent most of their time. Greg Bretzing,

special agent in charge of the Portland FBI, said investigators have begun their sweep of the property. Karl said that process is still ongoing, however, but they hoped to finish the safety sweep of the buildings and begin processing evidence sometime Friday afternoon.

There was flammable and hazardous liquid materials stored at the site before the armed takeover, Karl said, and the FBI had information that "certain materials" might have been brought to the refuge by the protesters.

"So until we are able to go through the refuge and see what conditions those items are in, that they're properly secured and stored, or what has been brought on that we don't know about," the evidence collection will have to wait, Karl said.
