Convenience store targeted at 1 a.m.

Center Market in Stanfield was robbed at 1 a.m. Thursday, and the Stanfield Police are looking for help identifying a suspect.

During the robbery, a man walked into the Center Market, 530 N. Main St., Stanfield, and demanded cash, according to Bryon Zumwalt, Stanfield Police Chief. Zumwalt said the cashier provided an unspecified amount money and the suspect left. Police responded to the scene shortly after the robbery and remained at the convenience store until about 5 a.m.

The suspect was captured on video and is described as a Hispanic male, around 20 years old, 6 feet tall, with a medium build and a thin mustache.

The police chief said the man did not display a weapon.

"He never tried to conceal his face," Zumwalt said. "We are hoping we can get further information from the public to identify that suspect."

The last store robbery in Stanfield was also at Center Market and also in the early morning, Zumwalt said. In that incident, the convenience store was robbed at gunpoint in early December.

"Anything suspicious, call dispatch and we are more than happy to check it out — even if it's nothing, especially at that time in the morning," Zumwalt said.

Anyone with information about this case, or who knows the person in the photos, is asked to contact the Stanfield Police Department 24 hours a day through dispatch at 541-966-3651.

Washington man called officer to say he killed family

BELFAIR, Wash. (AP) — A gunman who killed four people in rural Washington state called an officer he previously encountered to say he shot his family, leading to an hourslong standoff at a home Friday that ended with his suicide, authorities said.

A 12-year-old girl related to the victims survived and was taken to the hospital for an evaluation, Mason County sheriff's Chief Deputy Ryan Spurling said. Her condition was not immediately known.

The officer who took the shooter's call went to the home across Puget Sound from Seattle with another deputy. Authorities negotiated with the man for about three hours before a SWAT team entered the house in a heavily wooded area and found the bodies.

The gunman "apparently came outside the home and shot himself," Sheriff Casey Salisbury said. "It's a terrible tragedy."

his four victims have been identified. Authorities did not detail the previous interaction between the shooter and the officer he called.

Jack Pigott, who lives down the road, said he heard gunshots Thursday night but none Friday.

The couple who lived in the house about 25 miles southwest of Seattle were in their 40s and had been married for four or five years, Pigott said. The wife had two teenage sons who were adopted from Russia during a previous marriage. She also had a daughter who was adopted from China.

Pigott said the husband had a heating and air conditioning contractor business. He had recently been hospitalized, Pigott said, but he didn't know why. When he returned home, he was on a lot of medications, Pigott said of the man.

It was common for the family to do shooting practice, Pigott said, and that's what he thought of when he heard the gunfire.

"I was getting a load of wood into the house, and I hear some gunshots," he said. "Four or five, a pause and then another round."

Residents know each other in the area that has homes with large lots with room for horses, Pigott said.

The SWAT team went in around 12:30 p.m., Spurling said. Officers said they had 11 buildings to clear on the property but reported they had found the bodies shortly after entering the first building.

The shooting comes days after a 26-year-old man shot and killed his parents and two younger sisters before taking his own life at the family's home in Phoenix.
