Oregon Republican Party eliminates superdelegates

SALEM (AP) — Oregon's Republican Party has changed its rules to eliminate superdelegates, meaning more delegates could go to the winner of the state's May 17 primary.

Until now, the state party's top three leaders were able to support any candidate at national conventions, regardless of the primary results, reported The Bulletin. But the party approved a rule change during a Medford meeting last week that will require its leaders to vote according to the primary results.

If there is a contested convention, Oregon's Republican leaders will have to vote according to the peoples' wishes during the first two rounds of voting.

"Whoever gets the most votes will probably get the three of us," said Bill Currier, one of the three formerly unbound delegates and the chairman of the Oregon Republican Party.

The rule involves just three of the 2,472 delegates attending the GOP's July convention in Cleveland, but that could make a difference in a tight race to amass the 1,237 delegates need to win.

Donald Trump is currently leading the Republican field with 742 pledged delegates, while Texas Sen. Ted Cruz has 516 and Ohio Gov. John Kasich has 143.

Oregon made the change at the behest of the Republican National Committee, which is hoping to avoid candidates lobbying to win over unbound delegates. That happened in 2012, when Republican Ron Paul's supporters won over unbound delegates from Mitt Romney, the eventual nominee.

"We wanted to make it the same. We're no different. We all have a vote. We wanted to conform to the same rules that the rest of the delegates did," said Donna Cain, another formerly unbound delegate and the state party's national committee-woman.

IS takes Syrian town from rebels

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Islamic State militants recaptured a vital border crossing in northern Syria and shot down a government warplane in the country's west Monday as the U.N.'s special envoy urged the warring parties to respect a fragile cease-fire ahead of peace talks set to resume in Geneva this week.

U.N. Special Envoy Staffan de Mistura's plea came amid stepped up fighting around the northern city of Aleppo, Syria's largest, and elsewhere in the country's northern and western provinces.

He spoke after meeting with Syrian Foreign Minister Walid al-Moallem in Damascus in preparation for the talks, set to begin Wednesday in Geneva between the government and an umbrella opposition coalition backed by the U.S., Saudi Arabia, and other Western powers.

De Mistura said he emphasized the importance "of protecting and maintaining and supporting the cessation of hostilities," describing it as fragile and stressing that all sides "need to make sure that it continues to be sustained."

The U.N. envoy said the talks would focus on a political transition for Syria, where the civil war, now in its sixth year, has killed 250,000 people and displaced half the country's pre-war population of 23 million people. About 4 million people have fled the country.

Paris-Brussels attacks network a 'supercell' of extremism

PARIS (AP) — The number of people linked to the Islamic State network that attacked Paris and Brussels reaches easily into the dozens, with a series of new arrests over the weekend that confirmed the cell's toxic reach and ability to move around unnoticed in Europe's criminal underworld.

From Belgium's Molenbeek to Sweden's Malmo, new names are added nearly daily to the list of hardened attackers, hangers-on, and tacit supporters of the cell that killed 130 people in Paris and 32 in Brussels. A computer abandoned by one of the Brussels suicide bombers in a trash can contained not only his will, but is beginning to give up other information as well, including an audio file indicating the cell was getting its orders directly from a French-speaking extremist in Syria, according to a police official with knowledge of the investigation.

The official spoke on condition of anonymity because he wasn't authorized to speak publicly about the investigation.

Patrick Skinner, a former CIA case officer who is now with the Soufan Group security consultancy, described the Brussels-Paris network as a "supercell."
