saw a naked couple in the back seat. He told them to dress.

The trooper talked to Taylor Catherine Burke, 22, of Pendleton, who said she was the driver and had stopped there about 15 minutes earlier. The trooper noted the "smell of alcoholic beverage on her breath" and the "multiple empty beer cans in the back seat." She also showed signs of impairment during a sobriety test.

MISSION

Speaker series highlights Oregon's Chinese history

By TAMMY MALGESINI

East Oregonian

The Oregon Historical Society is sponsoring programs across the state highlighting the impact of the Chinese American immigration in the mid-19th century.

From building infrastructure through the railroad and mining industries, establishing restaurants and laundry businesses to initiating advancements in pharmaceutical care, the stories of Chinese Americans reach across the state.

R. Gregory Nokes will present "Chinese in Eastern Oregon: The Forgotten Population" Saturday, April 30 at 1 p.m. at Tamastslitk Cultural Institute, located near Wildhorse Resort & Casino. After retiring from a 40-year journalism career, Nokes embarked on a second career as a historian, lecturer and author.

During an illustrated presentation Nokes will discuss the history of Chinese immigration to mining and railroad communities throughout Eastern Oregon.

Contributed by the Oregon Historical Society

R. Gregory Nokes will present "Chinese in Eastern Oregon: The Forgotten Population" as part of the The Chinese Oregon Speaker Series April 30 at Tamastslitk Cultural Institute.

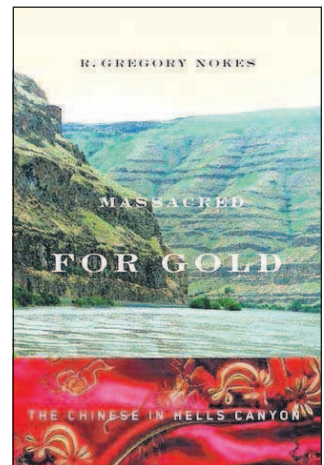

He'll talk about how they built thriving communities and why they disappeared. Nokes also will share stories of violence against the Chinese, including the 1887 Hells Canyon massacre.

Nokes said newspaper accounts at the time of the massacre were few and far between. The story came to light when a Wallowa County clerk discovered missing records in a safe more than 100 years after the deaths of nearly three dozen Chinese gold miners. Nokes, working for The Oregonian at the time, wrote an article about the discovery in 1995.

"It was a mystery and made a good news story," he said in a 2009 article in the East Oregonian.

With his interest in the story piqued, Nokes pursued additional information. He followed up with a 2006 article for the Oregon Historical Quarterly. In 2009, he released "Massacred for Gold: The Chinese in Hells Canyon," a 208-page book about the incident and ensuing cover-up.

The next speaker in the series to visit Tamastslitk will be Helen L. Ying. She will speak about "The Untold Story: Chinese American History in Oregon" Saturday, May 21 at 1 p.m.

Currently on display at the Oregon Historical Society is a pair of groundbreaking exhibits about local and national Chinese history. The museum is located at 1200 S.W. Park Ave., Portland.

For more information about the local presentations, call 541-429-7700 or visit www.tamastslitk.org. For more about the Oregon Historical Society, visit www.ohs.org/museum.
