MARIA: Donation account set up to help cover funeral costs

Tuesday Morning

"It's hard to believe that he could have done something like this," he said. "It's hard to accept."

The couple had their difficulties, he said, like any relationship. And their job schedules for a long time did not sync. She would work nights, Alva-Diaz said, and her husband worked days. That changed about a year ago, he said, when Villegas Garcia took work fighting wildfires. He even battled the large Columbia Complex Fire last year, which threatened the town of Dayton. The new job, though, also meant Villegas Garcia was gone for weeks at a time.

Alva-Diaz Still, and others said, they saw nothing indicating Villegas Garcia was capable of killing his wife and harming their children.

Maria's friends said accepting her death is even harder to comes to terms with, and sharing stories about her was just too raw.

Perez said Saturday's fundraiser also helped the people who knew Maria, allowing them to put their pain into something positive, answer a call to action for a good cause.

Alva-Diaz also set up a donation account at www.gofundme.com to help cover funeral costs and the medical bills for Maria and her children. Others also reported an account at Washington Federal to help the family. The East Oregonian has not verified that.

Friends of Maria Villegas of Milton-Freewater wash cars Saturday in the small Eastern Oregon city to raise funds to help her family and two young children in the wake of her recent murder.

Nine counties sue over Oregon's paid sick-leave law

ALBANY (AP) — Nine counties are suing the state, claiming Oregon's new paid sick-leave law is an unfunded government mandate.

KEZI-TV reports that Linn County commissioners filed the suit Friday in Linn County Circuit Court. They were joined by Douglas, Jefferson, Morrow, Malheur, Polk, Sherman, Wallowa and Yamhill counties.

Since January, Oregon law requires employers with at least ten employees to provide paid sick leave. Employers must provide one hour of sick time for every 30 hours an employee works, or 1 ¹/₃ hours for every 40 hours worked.

The commissioners are asking the state court for its interpretation of the constitution, which states they may refuse to comply with any state law if they aren't given funding from the state.
