Twin sisters' bickering relationship ends in deadly Hawaii crash

Identical twin sisters Alexandria and Anastasia Duval always lived together, played together and worked together, operating what were once two of the hottest yoga studios in the Palm Beach, business Twin Power Yoga. They would finish each other's sentences, and while they had boyfriends, their sibling relationship seemed to come first.

Florida, area. They called the

But after a reality TV project fell through, the two descended into a crosscountry spiral of business failures, debts, arguments and drunken run-ins with the law that all came to a tragic end last week, when their SUV plunged off a 200-foot cliff on Maui's rocky shore during what was described as a hair-pulling fight over the steering wheel.

Anastasia, 37, was killed, and Alexandria was arrested and jailed on second-degree murder charges, accused of deliberately causing her sister's death.

Leslie McMichael, who became the sisters' spiritual adviser after meeting them at a Kabala center in Florida, called it a horrible turn of events.

"They were beautiful twins with so much life. They were so funny. They were such a machine together that people would stop and watch them," she said.

Authorities said Alexandria was behind the wheel of a Ford Explorer on May 29 when witnesses saw the sisters arguing on Maui's Hana Highway, a perilously narrow, twisting route along a scenic stretch of coastline. A witness cleaning a family gravesite on the highway shoulder told police that he heard a woman screaming in the vehicle and that the passenger was pulling the driver's hair and the steering wheel.

The SUV accelerated, made a hard left turn and crashed into a rock wall, then went over the cliff, authorities said. Anastasia was pronounced dead at the scene. Alexandria was hospitalized in critical condition but appeared in court Monday with her arm in a sling.

The twins had been fighting and drinking earlier on the day of the crash, Federico Bailey, Anastasia's boyfriend, told the Maui News. He said they had gone camping together for the Memorial Day weekend.

The sisters' relationship involved distrust and constant fighting but also love, he said: "When they drink, their personalities change."

Alexandria's lawyer, Todd Eddins, disputed the allegations against her, saying she "did not try to harm herself or the person she most loved and was closest to in the world." He called it a "heart-shattering" tragedy for the sisters' family.

Before they changed their names from Alison and Ann Dadow, the twins ran two popular Twin Power studios in Palm Beach County, Florida, from 2008 to 2014.

Brett Borders, a former student of theirs, said they held the best yoga classes he has ever taken. "They were very good at picking and training yoga instructors. They were very consistent. The best teachers around. It was just very high quality," he said.

The sisters were living large, with fancy cars, before they suddenly closed the studios and bolted town, leaving behind bewildered customers and friends and many debts. Employees and vendors complained they hadn't been paid, and customers' memberships were rendered worthless.

McMichael said their downfall began after they were approached by reality television producers who wanted to feature them on a show, but then the show fell through.

The sisters moved to Utah and opened a yoga studio in the high-end ski town of Park City in 2014. They had several run-ins with the police during the two years they lived in the state.
