HERMISTON City clarifies Service Line Warranties letter

By JADE MCDOWELL
 East Oregonian

A letter being sent to Hermiston residents by Service Line Warranties of America is causing some confusion.

The letter bears the city of Hermiston logo on the envelope and the top of the letter but is not being sent by the city. The company does have permission to use the city's logo, however, after the city council voted to officially endorse the company last year.

Service Line Warranties offers insurance against the cost of replacing water lines between a home and a public utility connection, which is the homeowner's responsibility if the line leaks or bursts. Customers can pay $5.75 per month or $64 per year for repair coverage of up to $4,000 with no deductibles.

The letter is signed "City of Hermiston" but also includes a disclaimer that notes the city is "not responsible for administration of the program and no public funds are used in the marketing or administration of the program."

After a concerned citizen brought the letter up at Monday's city council meeting, noting that some people thought the letter was coming directly from the city of Hermiston, city manager Byron Smith said that the city had merely endorsed the company at the recommendation of the League of Oregon Cities to offer residents protection against what can be a very expensive bill if the water line to their house breaks.

"The city is just saying this is a good program if you want to use it," he said.

Smith said adjustments had been made to an earlier version of the letter to make it more clear that it was not a city program, and the council was welcome to withdraw its endorsement if it was not happy with the letter's current form. The council did not take any action.
