Pow wow to showcase American Indian dancing, drumming

Participants take part in an inter-tribal dance during grand entry of the 2015 Wildhorse Pow Wow in Mission. The three-day event starts Friday at 7 p.m. at the grass arena at Wildhorse Resort & Casino.

The drum has been called the heartbeat of Mother Earth — and a pow wow isn't possible without drums.

This year's Wildhorse Pow Wow host drum is award-winning Cree Confederation, from Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. The group took top honors during the 2015 Wildhorse Pow Wow.

Pageantry, colors and music are featured during the 22nd annual event, which kicks off Friday with a grand entry at 7 p.m. at the Pow Wow Grounds at Wildhorse Resort & Casino, located off Interstate 84 at Exit 216, Mission. There is no admission charge.

More than 300 native dancers — from youngsters and tribal elders to men and women of all ages — will compete for more than $80,000 in cash and prizes during the event, which continues Saturday from 1 p.m. to midnight and Sunday from 1-9 p.m.

Founded in 2007, Cree Confederation has traveled and sung all over Indian Country. Representing people of Treaty Six Cree First Nations, the drumming group bridges the older pow wow singing style with the contemporary evolution of today's vibrant pow wow culture.

They won the 2011 Canadian Aboriginal Music Award for best contemporary pow wow album for one of their CDs, "Pakosiyimitan."

Dallas Waskahat, the group's leader, said they are truly blessed with a sound that's for everyone to enjoy.

In addition, he said their focus is "singing for the people and believing in the drum."

drum groups will be on hand for the event. The drumming competition offers more than $30,000 in cash and prizes, including a first prize of $12,000.

In addition to the dancing and drumming competitions, vendors offer American Indian arts and crafts, beadwork, apparel and jewelry. Also, food and beverage booths will be plentiful, including the popular Indian fry bread.
