Caught in the flood that followed a heavy cloudburst just above her home, Mrs. M.C. McCabe, wife of a well known Butter Creek rancher, and her two year old baby boy were drowned Saturday evening. Two men and the three other children narrowly escaped with their lives. The McCabe ranch is on McDonald Canyon, which runs into upper Butter Creek in Morrow County. The cloudburst broke about 5:30 in the evening just above the McCabe place. At the time Mrs. McCabe, her children and the two hired men were in the house. So suddenly did the flood come down upon them that a wall of water twelve feet high was only a short distance away when they discovered it. Gill sounded the alarm and both he and the other men grabbed one of the young children. Mrs. McCabe grabbed the baby while the eldest children ran on ahead to higher ground. Gill declares that before he could go a few feet to higher ground the water was nearly up to his neck. Mrs. McCabe with the baby was just behind him, he says. When he deposited the child he was carrying in a safe spot he turned to help the woman but she and the baby had disappeared.

this month. He arrived in Seattle about ten days ago and struck out on his transcontinental trip Monday. Koshika, who is riding a 15-speed bicycle compete with saddle bags on both front and back wheels, said he isn't attempting to pedal across the mountains. He took a bus from Pendleton to Salt Lake City and shipped his bicycle by rail.

25 Years Ago From the East Oregonian July 2-3, 1991

Drivers of some of the nation's finest classic autos braked in Pendleton Tuesday just long enough to take a quick break before rolling off for an overnight stay at Richland, Wash. In the brief time each car idled at the Pendleton Convention Center, hundreds of spectators gathered around to view the convoy with a combined value estimated to be millions of dollars. The Pendleton Chamber of Commerce orchestrated pit crew assistance for each car and its driving team. Fifty crews, representing businesses and organizations, took turns handing out a bit of Pendleton hospitality. The Great American Race, a 4,280-mile cross country jaunt in twelve days, started from Norfolk, Va., and will end in Seattle on Independence Day. At stake is a purse totaling $276,650. Among those vying for the money are the drivers of a 1919 Indy 500 Packard, coupes, roadsters, pickups, a 1938 Kenworth tractor and a 1912 American LaFrance hose car (fire engine).

DEAR ABBY Girl should seek some help to sweeten her tart tongue

Dear Abby: I'm 15. My problem is I often mouth off and insult people. When I'm asked to explain why I said what I did, I answer with, "I don't know" or a shrug. It's the truth. It upsets me that I act this way, and I have lost friends because of it.

My parents think counseling and therapy are a coward's way out, and I don't want to go to my school counselors because they'll tell my parents or the state. Is it a blatant choice not to care, something subconscious or a possible disorder? I'm under a lot of stress. I know stressors can cause people to act this way, but I have a feeling it's not caused by stress. What should I do? — Nervous And Afraid

Dear Nervous And Afraid: Everyone snaps sometimes, but because it has ruined relationships, do talk to a school counselor or other adult you trust about what's happening. Your behavior may just be part of being a teenager, but if the stressors in your life might also be a factor, it's important you understand what triggers your behavior so you can modify it.

Dear Abby: I'm a 14-year-old girl and I have an identical twin. The problem is, she always gets all the attention, especially from boys. I don't understand why because we look exactly alike, and in my opinion, I have the better personality. When I'm around her, which is practically all the time, I feel invisible — as if people only see HER. How do I get people to stop noticing my sister and get them to see that I deserve some attention? — Here, Too, In California

Dear Here, Too: You say you and your twin are together practically all the time. THAT may be the problem. If you want to be noticed, start joining activities on your own. That way, you will develop separate interests and, along with them, separate friendships. Although you and your twin are identical, you do not have to be joined at the hip. Remember that.

Dear Abby: I'm 27 and my grandparents have played very important roles in my life. I know they won't be here forever, and I cry myself to sleep thinking about this.

Besides spending more time with them, what else do you suggest I do to prepare myself for their passing? — Loving Granddaughter

Dear Loving Granddaughter: Accept that death is a part of life and make sure that yours is a full and happy one. And make an effort to stay in the moment. The more time you spend obsessing about what will eventually happen, the less you will have to enjoy the blessings you have today.
