Mrs. Peyton T. Boone, wife of a well known project farmer, and her two year old daughter, Grace, were fatally burned last evening in a fire at their home two miles from Hermiston. Mrs. Boone was cooking in the kitchen about 8:30 when something went wrong with the gasoline stove and it flared up. Fearing an explosion, Mrs. Boone carried it outside and the child followed her. The clothing of both caught fire from the flames and they were burned terribly before the flames were extinguished. Mr. Boone and the other children were not at home at the time, having gone for a walk. Only the woman who cooks for the family was present.

A few young drivers in Stanfield, "squirreling" their cars around the hours of 2 and 3 a.m., have brought numerous complaints to the city council, and in the Wednesday night meeting the councilmen started moving in the direction of correcting the problem. Mayor Vic Stockard directed police officer Dick

Park to find out insurance costs to operate unmarked vehicles for police patrol work. The police officer also plans to report at the July 20 meeting on the placing of traffic "humps" in intersection areas to slow down traffic. Councilman William Jordan said: "The squealing wakes you up, you wait for the crash, and there's no bang."

A 15-foot-tall white concrete sculpture of the famous Let 'er Buck horse and cowboy should be in place in time to greet visitors to the Pendleton Round-Up at the end of the summer, artist Michael Booth said Monday. Booth and a dozen inmates from Eastern Oregon Correctional Institution are creating the 11-foot-high sculpture, which eventually will sit on a 4 1/2 foot base in the shrub-covered island in front of Dean's Market at the bottom of Southgate hill. The inmate-students are working as apprentices to Booth, an instructor at Blue Mountain Community College who directed inmates last year on two other outdoor sculptures on display at the Vert Theater and the BMCC campus.

Feral cat forms friendship with aging bear at zoo

FOLSOM, Calif. (AP) — A feral cat nicknamed "Little Bear" has forged an unlikely friendship with an aging bear at a California zoo.

The black cat with a clipped ear is rarely far from 18-year-old Sequoia, one of Folsom City Zoo Sanctuary's largest black bears. Zookeepers tell the Sacramento Bee that Little Bear joins the lumbering Sequoia as he lounges in the shade or wanders through his enclosure. They've even shared meals.

Little Bear is part of a colony of feral cats living at the zoo. Lead senior zookeeper Jill Faust says she suspects the cat feels comfortable around Sequoia because the bear's arthritis has slowed him down.

Mayor pardons
pet pig of deployed military man

MOSS POINT, Miss. (AP) — A mayor in a Mississippi city has decided not to banish a pet pig while its owner is on military duty in Iraq.

The Sun Herald reports that Moss Point Mayor Billy Broomfield has saved the bacon, so to speak, of Patrick the pig.

Patrick's owner, Otis Lundy, will be deployed with the Air Force until this fall, and a friend is taking care of his pets. Patrick is 7 years old, and Lundy had him for

Culinary school deployment is dream for military wife

Dear Abby: I'm confused about what to do and need help. I've been married for two years and I love my husband, but he is in the military and I have big dreams.

The fact that he is military means where he goes, I go. There's no moving to where I want. My dream is to go to Le Cordon Bleu in Paris, but it's a two-year program. If I follow my dream and career, it would mean two years completely apart because, with culinary school, there are no summer breaks.

My husband says I can follow that dream, but I know it would place a HUGE strain on our marriage. Please help me. I don't know what to do. — Dreaming In Illinois

Dear Dreaming: If your husband were deployed to a war zone for two years, there would be a long separation. While it might strain the marriage, the separation would not necessarily destroy it.

A degree from Le Cordon Bleu will enhance your career path in the future, which would benefit both of you. There's no reward without some risk, but if you do not pursue your dream, you may resent your husband in the future. He says you have his blessing to follow your dream, so do it!

Dear Abby: I am a gifted, introverted, Christian 13-year-old female with a strong sense of right and wrong. I disagree with some things my parents condemn as sinful.

I want to support gay rights and animal rights. My mother, in particular, takes the Bible literally, while I am more open. I want to take action to support these causes I know are right, but I'm afraid she will be angry.

I love my mother so much, Abby, and this makes me so sad. Please help me. — Ms. Kitty In Tennessee

Dear Ms. Kitty: Please don't be sad. Instead, be patient. There is no way to change the thinking of someone who takes the Bible — or any holy book, for that matter — literally. Do what you can now, but you may have to wait until you are older and on your own to become fully active in the causes you feel are important.

Dear Abby: I have developed a medical condition that requires me to wear adult diapers. That's hard enough for me, but why, when you get to the checkout, do they ask, "Do you want a bag for this?" Of course I do! I really don't want to flaunt the fact I wear a diaper all through the parking lot. I am neither young nor ancient — somewhere in between — and I never thought I'd ever use this product before age 80.

— Hard For Me
Dear Hard: Whether a customer would like a bag for his or her purchases is a question that baggers ask hundreds of times a day, to the point that it becomes automatic. The way to deal with this potentially embarrassing encounter would be to provide your own carryout bags when buying adult diapers. Many shoppers use them as a way to protect the environment. Alternatively, consider ordering the diapers online.
