If the proposed port of Umatilla is formed in accordance with the move now underway among farmers northwest of the city, the port commissioners, to be appointed by the governor, will have power to bond the port district and to levy taxes upon the property in the district. Unlike the road subject the people do not vote on bonding a port district, the entire matter being in the hands of the port commission. Thus the Pitman enterprise for a concrete roadway costing $420,000 will be handled by the port commissioners if the district is formed.

The jury is still out on a new farm machine aimed at revolutionizing pea harvesting. Officials at Lamb-Weston Inc., who have completed their fourth year of testing the awesome looking pea pod picking machine, are frankly disappointed in the results. "We had hoped the new machines would prove themselves enough for a try at using them in earnest next year, but we had to let them go back to the company that invented them," said Walter Minnick, administrative assistant for Lamb-Weston. Minnick said if the Chisom-Ryder Company, which invented the pea pod picker, can solve the machine's problems then he could see their widespread use. The main trouble with the machines is they still waste a lot of peas and are quite complex to operate.

25 Years Ago From the East Oregonian July 16-17, 1991

An off-duty jail sergeant, frustrated in his attempts to get a friend out of jail, broke out a window in the Umatilla County courthouse Sunday. Tim Roberts, a jailer for four years, was cited for criminal mischief, and also faces disciplinary action within the department, Sheriff Jim Carey said. Carey said Roberts went to the east entrance of the courthouse and used the jail phone near the door in an attempt to learn the amount of bail and how he could gain the release of a friend who had been arrested earlier. In his frustration, Roberts slammed his hand against a window and it broke. Robert was to return to work today following a two-day suspension.

DEAR ABBY

Teen fears past indiscretions will sabotage future choices

Dear Abby: When I was 13 and 14, I sent nude pictures to guys I didn't know over Kik. I am now 15 and interested in a career in education. I have read about educators getting fired for sending pictures. Should I be worried that I will never have a career in education? Or ever get into a good college? — Questioning Teen

JEANNE PHILLIPS
Advice

Dear Questioning: Sending nude photos at any age, especially if someone is underage, is extremely dangerous to both the sender and recipient, and I hope you will never do it again.

Although some colleges check into the online postings of applicants, I have never heard of any educator who was fired because of something that was posted when the person was 13. So study hard, keep your shirt on and good luck in the field of education.

Dear Abby: I'm an animal lover. I have always kept many different kinds of pets. My mother taught me to love and respect all animals, and I have had snakes, turtles, birds and other exotics as well as dogs, cats and rabbits. When I see a dead animal in the road, it makes me so sad I often cry, and the thought of anyone hurting or killing one for fun makes me sick to my stomach.

My problem is a co-worker who sits behind me. He's a hunter who often talks about killing animals, especially snakes and turtles. It is impossible to tune him out, and I'm afraid to ask him to stop. Moving desks is not an option. I often escape to the bathroom when he starts up, but there has to be a better way. I can't be seen crying at my desk when he talks like this because it's unprofessional. — Snake Lover

Dear Snake Lover: Your co-worker isn't a mind reader. Dig deep and find the courage to tell him that when he brings up the subject of killing animals, it upsets you and ask him to please stop. If he doesn't, bring it to the attention of your supervisor or HR because it could be considered a form of harassment if it interferes with you doing your job.

Dear Abby: I own a popular small cafe in the city. With only 12 tables (and no use of our patio during inclement weather), the restaurant fills up quickly and there is a long line at the door, especially on weekends.

I'm delighted to have so many wonderful guests and be in this predicament. But what can I do without being rude when, long after their meals, customers don't pick up on hints that we need the table? I think some people genuinely don't realize the imposition, while others simply don't care. How do I politely convey that "time's up"? — Hint, Hint

Dear H.H.: I discussed your letter with an experienced restaurateur. He said the answer to your question depends upon whether the "table hogs" (my words) are regular patrons. If they are, let them nurse their coffee and continue their conversations. If they aren't, then simply tell them there is a line of people waiting and you need the table. Business is business.
