BRIEFLY

Airline abuse suspect was returning from alcohol treatment

PORTLAND (AP) — The man accused of groping a 13-year-old girl on a flight from Dallas to Portland last month was returning to Oregon after completing a residential treatment for alcohol dependency in Florida.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Edmonds revealed the information Thursday while arguing for Chad Camp to remain in jail as he awaits trial on a charge of abusive sexual contact. A witness told police Camp had at least four mixed drinks during a layover in Dallas.

Magistrate Judge Youlee You decided to keep Camp in jail, saying there's a correlation between substance abuse and a defendant failing to show for court, The Oregonian/OregonLive reported.

"When you're high and using, nothing else matters," she said. "What's particularly troubling in this case, right after intensive residential treatment program in another state, there's evidence Mr. Camp consumed a lot of alcohol, right after being released from that program."

Camp, 26, has been in jail since FBI agents arrested him following the June 16 flight. He has pleaded not guilty.

Authorities said a flight attendant noticed the man's hand in the victim's crotch area, and a tear running down the girl's cheek. The girl was flying as an unaccompanied minor, and her family has filed a $10 million lawsuit against American Airlines.

Camp's lawyer, Steven Lindsey, asked for his client to be released to an inpatient residential treatment program in southern Oregon. But the prosecutor said it's not in a secure facility, and there was no guarantee Camp would stay.

Eugene man charged with murder tells court he killed a woman

EUGENE (AP) — An Oregon man charged with murder told a judge he needed another court-appointed attorney because he "killed a woman" and therefore shouldn't be represented by a woman.

"If I'd have killed a man, this woman could have defended me," Howard Stull, 79, of Eugene said of Elizabeth JC Baker.

Stull was arrested a year ago after his landlady died from stab wounds. He pleaded not guilty after his arrest.

Baker acknowledged in court that Stull has been a difficult client, accusing her and a defense investigator of being police officers, The Register-Guard reported.

She took issue with a state hospital report that determined Stull is mentally fit to stand trial. Stull, however, described himself in court as a "normal cat" and said he's "not nuts."

Lane County Judge Charles Zennaché agreed to remove Baker from the case, though he told Stull that Baker is one of the most zealous advocates among Eugene defense lawyers.

Baker was assigned to Stull in December after the defendant kicked his original lawyer off the case. The judge said he's maintaining a list of attorneys in case Stull is unhappy with lawyer No. 3.

Stull's landlady, 59-year-old Kathy Kay Braun, was found dead inside the garage at her home last July. Braun's mother told police her daughter allowed Stull to rent a bedroom in her garage, but later, after learning details of his criminal past, had difficulty trying to get him to leave, according to court records.

Stull's record includes convictions for robbery, assault and other crimes.

Baker said she had been exploring potential trial defenses on Stull's behalf, and that a neurologist concluded from a review of medical records that Stull has a traumatic brain injury.
