When recent Irrigon graduate Freddy Vera found out he was selected to participate in the prestigious Oregon East-West Shrine All-Star football game in early February, he was already counting down the days until he could strap up one more time.

"To be able to strap on the pads and helmet one last time there isn't a better feeling," Vera said of the selection. "My friends, coaches, and family get to see me play one last time. Not a lot of people get to experience this and I'm glad I get to. This is what I've always wanted to do is play in this game and finally I get to on Aug. 6th."

The Shrine Game, now in its 64th year of operation, is just one week away and several other local athletes are also chomping at the bit to play with some teammates

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. — A stale year for Jimmy Walker came to life Thursday in the PGA Championship when he saw putts drop and wound up leading a major for the first time in his career.

A great year might get even better for Henrik Stenson.

Walker took advantage of smoother greens in the morning Thursday at Baltusrol by rolling in six birdies for a 5-under 65, giving him a one-shot lead after the opening round of the final major that delivered its share of

Seahawks GM elated with team progress

Schneider grateful for opportunity to keep building a winner

By TIM BOOTH

RENTON, Wash. — Every so often, John Schneider will see what's happening with other franchises around the NFL and his personal appreciation for what's taken place during his tenure as general manager in Seattle is reinforced.

Schneider knows what's happened here over the past six seasons is unique. It's why he agreed to a contract extension last week that will keep him employed by the Seahawks through the 2021 season.

"It always fluctuates and changes with different ownership groups, but this is clearly a top-3, top-5 team in terms of ownership in the league and obviously we're biased so we would say it's (No.) 1," Schneider said Thursday. "Like I said, having a strong owner and a strong president is extremely important."

Schneider spoke with reporters as the Seahawks were preparing to begin training camp Saturday. The team

Lee ties tournament record at Women's British Open

WOBURN, England (AP) — Mirim Lee equaled the lowest-ever round at the Women's British Open by shooting a 10-under 62 Thursday to take the lead on the opening day.

The South Korean had 10 birdies as she secured a three-stroke advantage over Ariya Jutanugarn of Thailand, who carded a bogey-free round of 65 at Woburn Golf Club.

Lee matched Minea Blomqvist's 10-under 62 in the third round of the 2004 British Open at Sunningdale.

Lee says "it was probably one of my best ever rounds, although I still had some errant shots. I played every hole in a similar fashion, hitting fairways and greens. My best ever score was an 11 under par in LPGA qualifying."

"I definitely think I'm a different person. If you haven't changed over a period of time, that's a bad thing. I think me standing here is a testament to that ... I have a great support staff here, more so than I've ever felt before."

NCAA recommends just one live-contact practice per week

(AP) — The NCAA football oversight committee recommended Division I football programs hold only one "live-contact" practice per week.

The current guidelines, which are not enforceable rules, allow two live practices per week. The new guidelines announced Wednesday will take effect this season.

Live practices are defined as those that involve tackling to the ground and full-contact blocking, and can occur in full or half pads. Live contact does not include thudding, when players are not taken to the ground.

The Ivy League announced earlier this season that it would eliminate live tackling in practice, and even at the FBS level teams rarely have live tackling in practice.
