

PUBLIC SAFETY LOG

TUESDAY
12:34 a.m. - Drunk, obnoxious males on Southwest 17th Street, Pendleton, urinated in public.
6:36 a.m. - The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office called Oregon State Police to come to the scene of a crashed pickup on East Birch Creek Road near milepost 4 outside Pilot Rock when a deputy found two dead juvenile wild turkeys in the pickup's bed. A state trooper seized the illegal game, took photographs for evidence and disposed of the birds in an Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife "dead pit."
11:16 a.m. - Two pit bull dogs walked into a house and moving truck on Northwest Ellis Avenue, Pendleton, while people were trying to load the truck. Police did not find the dogs.
11:25 a.m. - A Pendleton caller on Northwest 14th Street reported a break-in and theft of two TVs, a safe, and two video game systems.
11:36 a.m. - A Pendleton resident on Northwest Eighth Street complained about a neighbor's dog, a Chihuahua/dachshund mix, that continues to run at large and may have impregnated her dog.

11:56 a.m. - A Pendleton man reported two people he knows are threatening him and his daughter's mother.
2:09 p.m. - A woman getting ready for a yard sale on South Washington Street, Weston, called 9-1-1 to report she left her cellphone on a table outside, and when she returned the phone was wet. She said she suspected someone put the phone into a bucket of water and then placed it back on the table.
3:13 p.m. - A Weston resident on Lupine Lane reported her neighbor harasses her on the phone, stalks her, and today blocked her driveway. She wanted to talk to a Umatilla County sheriff's deputy about it.
3:55 p.m. - The owner of a cabin at Owl Hoot Lane and Skyline Road, Weston, reported a break-in and theft of a chainsaw and generator.
6:06 p.m. - A car near the 600 block of Southwest Dorion Avenue, Pendleton, hit a Chihuahua and drove away. Police did not find the car.

7:25 p.m. - A Hermiston-area woman on Frontage Road reported the theft of $8,000 from her safe.
8:49 p.m. - Bicycle thefts are one of the area's most common crimes, right up there with hit-and-runs. One Milton-Freewater woman reported the theft of a mountain bike from the 200 block of West Broadway, but this time the caller said the thief left a replacement bike.
9:01 p.m. - A caller reported possible poaching of a cow elk at Meadowood Speech & Hearing Camp on Meadowood Road, Weston.
10:16 p.m. - The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office responded to a report of a prowler at a house on East Van Buren Street, Athena, but any suspect was gone before the deputy arrived.
11:29 p.m. - A Pendleton resident at Riverside Mobile Estates, 2712 N.E. Riverside Ave., told police a pickup shined its lights inside her house for more than an hour and a half, but it left when she went outside.

FBI: Transit officer first lawman charged under U.S. terror law

By MATTHEW BARAKAT
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Prosecutors brought the first-ever federal terrorism charges against a law enforcement officer in the U.S., alleging Wednesday that a patrol officer with the D.C. region's transit police bought about $250 worth of gift cards for someone he thought was working with the Islamic State group.
Nicholas Young, 36, of Fairfax, was arrested Wednesday at Metro Transit Police headquarters in Washington and charged with a single count of attempting to provide material support to a terrorist group. According to an FBI affidavit, Young bought the gift cards last month that he intended for the Islamic State to use to purchase mobile messaging apps. Young actually gave the codes for the gift cards to an undercover FBI officer, the affidavit said.

He made a brief court appearance Wednesday afternoon, wearing a T-shirt and what appeared to be his uniform slacks.

David Smith, who was appointed to represent Young after the hearing, said he could not comment because he had not yet been able to research the details of the case.

If convicted, Young could face up to 20 years in prison.

Young had been under surveillance since 2010, and he traveled to Libya at least once in 2011, where he said he joined rebel forces seeking to oust dictator Moammar Gadhafi, the affidavit said. He traveled with body armor, a Kevlar helmet and other military-style items.

Young was deeply paranoid about law enforcement spying on him, often taking out the battery of his cellphone when he wanted to go somewhere and talk, the document said. Young frequently told one undercover source to be wary of potential informants, according to the affidavit.

On Jan. 24, 2011, an undercover officer said Young told the officer he once aimed an AK-47-style rifle out of a window at his residence, scanning for law enforcement he believed was watching him. On another occasion, he grew angry that the FBI talked to his family and co-workers and said he wanted to find the FBI agent and kidnap and torture her.

The undercover officer said he "doubted that Young seriously intended to act upon those words," according to the affidavit.

As police searched Young's town-home in Fairfax, neighbor Dina Ahmad described him as standoffish and said he had occasional run-ins with the homeowners' association over his cluttered front lawn.

He often worked on his car at late hours, and the car was adorned with anti-Israel bumper stickers, she said.

"We knew something was weird about him," Ahmad said. "You just kind of got that creepy vibe off of him."

Joshua Stueve, spokesman for the U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, said Young posed no threat to the Metro system, and nowhere in the affidavit does it mention the subway and bus system for the nation's capital.

Metro spokesman Dan Stessel said Young, who had been employed since 2003, was fired.

"Obviously, the allegations in this case are profoundly disturbing. They're disturbing to me, and they're disturbing to everyone who wears the uniform," Metro General Manager Paul Wiedefeld said in a statement.

FBI spokesman Andrew Ames confirmed that Young is the first law enforcement officer to be charged under the federal government's terrorism law.

Young was an associate of two other people charged with terror-related crimes. In 2010, law enforcement interviewed Young because of his links to Zachary Chesser, who eventually pleaded guilty to trying to join the militant group al-Shabab and to issuing threats to the makers of the "South Park" cartoon series after they penned an episode he found insulting to Islam.

Young also met regularly with Amine El Khalifi, who pleaded guilty in a sting operation in which he planned to attempt a suicide bombing at the U.S. Capitol in 2012.

Authorities said that in their years of monitoring Young, his purchase of the gift cards was the first action that crossed the line to where he could be charged with a crime, and they moved to arrest him as soon as it occurred.

As he was under surveillance, though, Young frequently made alarming comments, according to the affidavit. During one conversation with an undercover officer, Young said if he was ever betrayed by someone, "that person's head would be in a cinder block at the bottom of" a lake.

In March 2015, he raised suspicion when he brought a large amount of ammunition, AK-47s and a pistol to an off-duty weapons training event provided by another Metro officer. Young said he owned even more weapons, according to the affidavit.

He praised the 2015 Paris terrorist attacks at the Bataclan music hall and elsewhere, as well as the earlier Charlie Hebdo attacks, the document said.

According to George Washington University's Program on Extremism, Young is the 100th person since March 2014 to be charged with an offense related to support for the Islamic State.

Seamus Hughes, the program's deputy director, said Young's case is an outlier not just because it involves a police officer. Hughes said Young is significantly older than the average age of 26 associated with these charges. In addition, he said, court documents show that Young embraced radical ideology for six years or more; the typical radicalization occurs more quickly.

"The radicalization here did not occur overnight," Hughes said.
