

PUBLIC SAFETY LOG

WEDNESDAY

7:58 a.m. - A caller told the Umatilla County Sheriff's Office she was upset about "nothing being done about the transients" living on the Walla Walla River at Nursery Bridge on Eastside Road, Milton-Freewater.

8:06 a.m. - A Pendleton woman reported she put up two "no trespassing" signs up on her fence on Tutuilla Road, and her neighbor removed both.

9:05 a.m. - A woman on Southeast Court Avenue, Pendleton, told police she discovered the head of her cat on her outside barbecue.

11:34 a.m. - Two or three juveniles pulled out the school crossing sign in the area of the 700 block of Southeast Third Street, Pendleton.

12:24 p.m. - Milton-Freewater police received a report of gang graffiti on the sidewalk on the 1000 block of North Elizabeth Street.

1:40 p.m. - A barefoot man wearing a dark blue shirt and gray boxer-briefs walked into the United States Post Office in Pendleton.

1:41 p.m. - A Pilot Rock woman told police someone poisoned her cat last week. She said she thought it was retaliation for reporting someone's barking dogs.

1:46 p.m. - The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office received information about possible dog neglect on the 77600 block of North Ash Road, Stanfield. The dogs are in covered kennels and lack food and water.

4:31 p.m. - A caller with a nursery at 85019 Highway 11, Milton-Freewater, reported someone during the weekend tried to break into the building, cut wires and stole breakers, which could cost $500-$600.

5:33 p.m. - A Baker City woman's stop to use a restroom on Interstate 84 near Pendleton turned into a serious downer. Oregon State Police reported the 69-year-old parked her Volkswagen Beetle on the eastbound side of the Deadman Pass Rest Area about 12 miles east of Pendleton. She turned off the car, put it in neutral, but forgot to set the emergency brake. She locked the car when she got out to use the restroom, and while she was gone, witnesses told police, the car rolled backward, hit some sign posts and kept right on going about 150 feet down the embankment opposite the rest area entrance. No one was hurt, the signs sustained minor damage, but the Beetle needed a tow.

The woman got a ride to Wildhorse Resort & Casino about six miles east where a relative met her.

8:11 p.m. - A Pendleton woman on Southeast Court Avenue called police after seeing a bag dripping blood in her yard. She said it could be the remains of her cat, but asked for an officer to check in case it was something different.

10:11 - Two males, one armed with a gun, knocked on the door of a trailer on Fifth Street. Umatilla, stole tools from the porch, then left on foot.

11:17 p.m. - A woman told the Umatilla County Sheriff's Office she received permission from a deputy to leave her car across from a residence on Joy Lane until Thursday. However, her neighbor, who she's "having issues" with, pushed the car onto someone's property.

Mosquito spray to occur this weekend

HERMISTON — The West Umatilla Mosquito Control District will conduct aerial spraying this weekend to combat West Nile Virus.

According to a press release, a twin engine airplane will spray 10,240 acres north and east of Hermiston after sunset Saturday or Sunday, depending on weather. These targeted areas have high populations of vector mosquitoes, some of which may be carrying the virus. No areas within Hermiston city limits are currently slated for spraying.

Western Umatilla County is now up to 10 positive samples in 2016. Samples have been collected near Stanfield, Umatilla, and east of Hermiston so far. Most recently, positive samples turned up near Irrigon, Cold Springs Reservoir and Cooney Lane near the Hermiston Wastewater Treatment Plant.

For more information please contact the West Umatilla Mosquito Control District at 541-567-5201. You can also visit the Oregon Department of Human Services West Nile Virus page at www.public.health.oregon.gov for virus updates in Umatilla County.

Terminally ill woman holds party before ending her life

SAN DIEGO (AP) — In early July, Betsy Davis emailed her closest friends and relatives to invite them to a two-day party, telling them: "These circumstances are unlike any party you have attended before, requiring emotional stamina, centeredness and openness."

And just one rule: No crying in front of her.

The 41-year-old artist with ALS, or Lou Gehrig's disease, held the gathering to say goodbye before becoming one of the first Californians to take a lethal dose of drugs under the state's new doctor-assisted suicide law for the terminally ill.

"For me and everyone who was invited, it was very challenging to consider, but there was no question that we would be there for her," said Niels Alpert, a cinematographer from New York City.

"The idea to go and spend a beautiful weekend that culminates in their suicide — that is not a normal thing, not a normal, everyday occurrence. In the background of the lovely fun, smiles and laughter that we had that weekend was the knowledge of what was coming."

Davis worked out a detailed schedule for the gathering on the weekend of July 23-24, including the precise hour she planned to slip into a coma, and shared her plans with her guests in the invitation.

More than 30 people came to the party at a home with a wraparound porch in the picturesque Southern California mountain town of Ojai, flying in from New York, Chicago and across California.

One woman brought a cello. A man played a harmonica. There were cocktails, pizza from her favorite local joint, and a screening in her room of one of her favorite movies, "The Dance of Reality," based on the life of a Chilean film director.

As the weekend drew to a close, her friends kissed her goodbye, gathered for a photo and left, and Davis was wheeled out to a canopy bed on a hillside, where she took a combination of morphine, pentobarbital and chloral hydrate prescribed by her doctor.

Kelly Davis said she loved her sister's idea for the gathering, which Betsy Davis referred to as a "rebirth."

"Obviously it was hard for me. It's still hard for me," said Davis, who wrote about it for the online news outlet Voice of San Diego. "The worst was needing to leave the room every now and then, because I would get choked up. But people got it. They understood how much she was suffering and that she was fine with her decision. They respected that. They knew she wanted it to be a joyous occasion."

Davis ended her life a little over a month after a California law giving the option to the terminally ill went into effect. Four other states allow doctor-assisted suicide, with Oregon the first in 1997.

Opponents of the law in lobbying against it before state legislators argued that hastening death was morally wrong, that it puts terminally ill patients at risk for coerced death by loved ones and could become a way out for people who are uninsured or fearful of high medical bills.

Marilyn Golden of the Disability Rights Education & Defense Fund, said her heart goes out to anyone dealing with a terminal illness, but "there are still millions of people in California threatened by the danger of this law."

Davis spent months planning her exit, feeling empowered after spending the last three years losing control of her body bit by bit. The painter and performance artist could no longer stand, brush her teeth or scratch an itch. Her caretakers had to translate her slurred speech for others.

"Dear rebirth participants you're all very brave for sending me off on my journey," she wrote in her invitation. "There are no rules. Wear what you want, speak your mind, dance, hop, chant, sing, pray, but do not cry in front of me. OK, one rule."

During the party, old friends reconnected and Davis rolled in and out of the rooms in her electric wheelchair and onto the porch, talking with her guests.

At one point, she invited friends to her room to try on the clothes she had picked out for them. They modeled the outfits to laughter. Guests were also invited to take a "Betsy souvenir" — a painting, beauty product or other memento. Her sister had placed sticky notes on the items, explaining each one's significance.

Wearing a Japanese kimono she bought on a bucket-list trip she took after being diagnosed in 2013, she looked out at her last sunset and took the drugs at 6:45 p.m. with her caretaker, her doctor, her massage therapist and her sister by her side. Four hours later, she died.
