Americans denied gold for 1st day since 2008 Beijing Games

By ARNIE STAPLETON Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO — The Americans were denied a gold medal Monday for the first time since the 2008 Beijing Olympics, and it took two big stumbles to keep the "Star Spangled Banner" on

One of the slips cost U.S. gymnastics star Simone Biles gold on the balance beam. The other secured Shaunae Miller's win in the women's 400 meters over Allyson Felix, the U.S. star who missed out on her fifth Olympic gold medal.

Miller, of the Bahamas, crossed .07 seconds ahead of Felix thanks to a headfirst dive that came after a downpour forced a delay in the evening events and sent spectators scurrying for shelter at Olympic Stadium.

Biles lost her status as Rio de Janeiro's juggernaut after a blunder on the balance beam prevented her from a record-tying fourth gold in gymnastics at these games.

The American's shutout came on a day the Rio Games were dogged by rain, wind and fire.

In the morning, there was too little wind, then too much, at the sailing regatta on Guanabara Bay, where men's and women's medal races were postponed until Tuesday. In the afternoon, smoke and ash from a windwhipped wildfire billowed over the field hockey stadium in Deodoro.

Biles' blunder allowed Sanne Wevers of the Netherlands to take the gold medal and Laurie Hernandez of the U.S. to slip past Biles for the silver. It also ended Biles' bid to become the first female gymnast to win five golds in a single Olympics.
