LA GRANDE — Exactly one year ago, Pendleton's Kai Quinn and Jacob Banks and Heppner's C.J. Kindle and Patrick Collins were pouring their blood, sweat, and tears onto practice fields in Eastern Oregon, preparing for their senior years and last hurrahs on the football field as high schoolers.

This year, the quad of athletes again find themselves on a practice field in Eastern Oregon, but this time it's all together as they are getting settled for their freshmen seasons at Eastern Oregon University. With fall camp nearing completion, Kindle said he's been happy with the way he's performed, but admitted his first few days were a wake-up call.

Mountaineers hope offseason work leads to better results

LA GRANDE — For many sports teams, the cliché "It's about how you finish" is a popular talking point, referencing the need to not let up down the stretch in games or in a season.

But the Eastern Oregon Mountaineer football team has a different talking point for the upcoming season — "It's about how we start." Mountaineers coach Tim Camp points to the simple fact of his team being outscored 100-17 in the first quarter of games last season as the need for that motto.

"I should've been fired!" Camp said jokingly.

He's serious about the team's need to start fast in 2016, though.

"Everybody always wants to talk about finishing but for us it's just about getting going.

We emphasized it early in camp and will continue to work on it throughout the year."

The early deficits were especially frustrating to Camp because of how well his team performed throughout the rest of games, outscoring their opponents in every other quarter for a combined margin of 325-242. Senior quarterback Zach Bartlow said Camp's message is well received as the team looks to improve on its 4-7 record from 2015.

"We're focusing on that for sure, it was addressed the first night and every day since," Bartlow said. "It all starts with how we practice, we can't wait until the third or fourth drill to be at our best, we have to be ready for the first ... we have to hold ourselves accountable."

Sanchez homers again, Tanaka rolls against M's

Yankees gain ground in AL wild card race

By TIM BOOTH

SEATTLE — It took little time for Yankees' rookie Gary Sanchez to receive the type of respect normally reserved for established veterans considered among the elite hitters.

Seven home runs in the past nine games will quickly earn anyone respect. And in the case of Sanchez in Wednesday's 5-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners that torrid stretch led to him receiving two intentional walks just so the Mariners could face Mark Teixeira instead.

"You don't see it very often. You really don't," New York manager Joe Girardi said. "It means that (Seattle manager) Scott Servais is paying attention to how he is swinging, number one, besides just here in Seattle. It just says a lot about him, his abilities."

straight start helped the Yankees take two of three from the Mariners and close on one of the team's they're chasing in the AL wild-card race. The Yankees won their third straight road series.

Tanaka (11-4) threw seven innings and got the better of the Mariners and his former Japan league teammate Hisashi Iwakuma (14-9).

And yet he was overshadowed by Sanchez.

"It's outstanding, astonishing," Tanaka said through an interpreter.

Sanchez homered into the second deck in left field in the first inning on the first pitch from Iwakuma, his ninth home run in 18 games since joining the Yankees lineup on Aug. 3. He became the fifth player since 1913 to have nine or more home runs in his first 21 games. Trevor Story of Colorado had 10 homers in his first 21 games earlier this season.

Sanchez added a double later in the game and his intentional walk in the seventh inning led to Teixeira's RBI single for a 4-0 lead. The Mariners took no chances with the new catcher the next time, either, again intentionally walking him.

US Soccer suspends Solo 6 months

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. women's national team goalkeeper Hope Solo has been suspended for six months for what U.S. Soccer termed conduct "counter to the organization's principles."

U.S. Soccer President Sunil Gulati said Wednesday that comments Solo made after the U.S. lost to Sweden during the Rio Olympics were "unacceptable and do not meet the standard of conduct we require from our National Team players."

Solo called Sweden a "bunch of cowards" after the Swedes beat the U.S. 4-3 on penalties following a 1-1 draw in the quarterfinals of the Olympic tournament.

Solo, 35, who was previously suspended for 30 days early in 2015 for her conduct, will not be eligible for selection to the national team until February.

"We'll say that it's ironic the team now takes issue with the timing of Joey (Bosa's) arrival since the Chargers decided to remain silent through the first 14 days of training camp."

Participation in high school sports reached all-time high in 2015-16

INDIANAPOLIS — Led by an encouraging report in football participation nationwide, the number of participants in high school sports increased for the 27th consecutive year in 2015-16 according to the annual High School Athletics Participation Survey conducted by the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS).

Based on figures from the NFHS the number of participants in high school sports reached an all-time high of 7,868,900 — an increase of 61,853 from the previous year.

After a decline of almost 10,000 participants in football the previous year, the number of boys playing 11-player football in 2015 was almost identical to 2014 with a drop of just 309 — from 1,083,617 to 1,083,308.

Track and field registered the largest increase in participants, with an additional 12,501 boys and 7,243 girls. Track and field remains the most popular sport for girls with 485,969 participants.
