

Umatilla County sheriff's office adds to ranks

East Oregonian

Two new Umatilla County sheriff's deputies are on their way to police school.

The sheriff's office in a written statement reported Steven McDaniel and Jeff Brown will attend the 16-week basic police course at the Oregon Public Safety Academy, Salem. Once they complete that work, they will have several more weeks of field training.

The sheriff's office hired McDaniel as a full time patrol deputy on Sept. 15. He worked as an on-call corrections deputy with the agency since 2014. He has 18 years of experience in the Oregon Army National Guard and is a chief warrant officer with Bravo Company, 168 Aviation, Pendleton. McDaniel, a Riverside High School, Boardman, graduate, pilots a CH-47F Chinook helicopter and served two tours of combat duty in Iraq and Kuwait and this summer returned from duty in Afghanistan.

Brown has been a

Umatilla County Community Justice probation and parole officer since 2006 and Tuesday begins work as a sheriff's patrol deputy. He is a Pendleton High School graduate and has a state certification for parole and probation officers.

And come Dec. 1, sheriff's deputy Loren Westmoreland takes on the role of detective with the Umatilla County Community Justice Department. The new position came about through a collaboration between community justice director

Dale Primmer, Sheriff Terry Rowan and their departments.

Westmoreland will head up fugitive apprehension for probation and parole absconders, sex offender registration and compliance, and investigating new charges involving persons under community justice supervision.

Westmoreland has been with sheriff's office for more than four-and-half years. He holds an intermediate police certification and has a bachelor's degree in criminology.
