call. This is a belief system for me, something ingrained in me. If she were a stranger, I would absolutely not be around her.

She's my daughter, and we have always had our differences. But I feel so strongly about what she's doing and has done that I no longer want to be in the same room with her.

The American Academy of Pediatrics and the March of Dimes have both recommended (for years!) against bed sharing in these young infants.

These deaths, mostly from suffocation or overheating, are sad and mostly preventable. The acceptance of bed sharing due to cultural influences is difficult to overcome.

Dear Dr. Smith: I appreciate your writing to me. Your point is an important one, and that I omitted it was an oversight.

Dear Abby: My daughter is 29, and we recently had a respectful, although heated, discussion about politics, agendas and the candidates.

Something came to light, though. She's not the person I thought she was. She informed me that she had had an abortion.

Broken In Illinois

Dear Broken: I can only imagine how you must have felt to have learned about the abortion during a "heated discussion."

Because you feel broken, this is something you should discuss with your religious adviser and take your cue from him or her.

Dear Abby: Are you supposed to take a gift to an engagement party? The couple has been living together. They just got engaged and are planning a wedding in two years.

Dear Ana Marie: A gift would be a nice gesture. It doesn't have to be lavish — a lovely frame for their engagement picture would be thoughtful.
