THURSDAY

3:35 a.m. - A Hermiston man told police he might look like a burglar but wasn't one. The caller said he locked himself out of his home on Southwest 11th Street and was wearing black pants and gray-and-black hooded sweatshirt in case the neighbors call and reported someone was breaking in.

5:36 a.m. - Oregon State Police and other agencies responded to a crash on the westbound side of Interstate 84 near milepost 182. The driver, a 45-year-old woman from Stanfield, told police she saw something in the road, tried to miss the object and lost control of her Accura RDX, which slid off the highway, hit the south shoulder and rolled one-and-a-half times before ending up on its roof.

Information indicated the driver was injured but did not specify to what extent.

10:44 a.m. - Thieves stole propane tanks from Drakes RV Services, 4701 N.W. A Ave., Pendleton.

11:05 a.m. - Hermiston police received a request from a doctor to check on the welfare of a mother and her newborn child because the mother appears confused.

11:10 a.m. - A Pilot Rock woman reported she found a pink hunter ribbon tied around the post of her mailbox and last night a diesel pickup stopped in front of her driveway. She said she was concerned the ribbon could be a marker for someone to break into the house.

ARRESTS, CITATIONS

*A caller at 2:15 p.m. identified a man who was stripping one of his vehicle at a residence on the 200 block of Lena Drive, Stanfield.

The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office arrested the suspect, Kevin Haskell Bond, 44, no address provided, for second-degree trespass, first-degree theft and third-degree criminal mischief.

Marksman killed gunman after child ran to porch

SEATTLE (AP) — The gunman had already shot a police officer, threatened to kill two children and barricaded himself upstairs in a house for 11 hours when one of the kids, a 6-year-old boy, escaped.

As the suspect held a little girl as a human shield, his movements exposed him to a sheriff's marksman who targeted him through a window and killed him with a shot to the head, allowing the 8-year-old girl to break free from his grasp and run to safety, authorities disclosed Friday about the killing of Bruce R. Johnson in Tacoma.

"Once we were able to assess that the kids were still alive, it went into play," sheriff's spokesman Ed Troyer said of the SWAT team's plan to end the standoff in a suburban neighborhood south of Seattle. "He had a choice to put the guns down. We weren't about to let those kids get hurt."

The standoff began after Police Officer Reginald "Jake" Gutierrez, 45, was fatally shot Wednesday night when he and his partner went into the house to investigate a domestic violence call. Gutierrez's partner returned fire and helped get Johnson's wife safely out of the house.

Other officers came under fire as they worked their way into the house and pulled Gutierrez out. He later died in surgery.

Police will escort his body to a funeral home on Friday.

The 17-year veteran officer is survived by three daughters and a granddaughter. A fund has been set up to help the children, and the department is overseeing another fund to help with memorial services.

Police went to the house Wednesday after Johnson's wife told officers that he had locked her out of the house. The officers called police.

Several adults and the two children had been in the home earlier in the day, but it was not initially clear whether everyone had escaped when the shooting started, spokeswoman Loretta Cool said.

"Others were saying the kids went down to the park, but nobody could confirm where they were," Cool said. "There wasn't a sighting of them the whole time, no noise."

As officials negotiated with Johnson, the SWAT team moved into the basement and then to the main floor of the house, cornering him upstairs, Troyer said.

That's when they confirmed the kids were still inside.

Johnson had threatened to kill the children, and officers heard screaming and gunshots during the standoff, but once the officers determined the children were still alive, they executed a plan to get them out.
