Oregon considers permit fees for non-motorized boats

MEDFORD (AP) — Marine officials in Oregon are asking lawmakers to consider imposing fees on people who use kayaks, rafts and other non-motorized watercraft on the state's public waterways. Most of the cost of upkeep for Oregon's boat ramps, other marine facilities and marine patrols is currently covered by fees charged to boaters with motorized vessels, reported

The Mail Tribune. The Oregon State Marine Board wants state lawmakers to charge non-motorized boaters a permit fee that would be used for the same purpose. The program proposed by the marine board would also fund expanded services for non-motorized boat facilities and patrols, such as marine patrols on waterways heavily used by non-motorized boats and removing navigational hazards. It would also offer grants to public agencies to buy, build, expand or renovate facilities for non-motorized boats. Under the proposed legislation, a one-week permit for non-motorized boating would cost $4, an annual permit would cost $12 and a two-year permit would cost $20. Marine Board spokeswoman Ashley Massey said the legislation outlining the program does not yet have a sponsor. She said the owners of non-motorized vessels, which include driftboats, kayaks, sailboats and others, have said they would accept modest fees if they see results on the water. "It's really about meeting the needs they told us they had," Massey said.

BRIEFLY

Trump declares disaster from storm, frees federal aid

SALEM (AP) — President Donald Trump has declared a major disaster exists in Oregon from a severe winter storm and flooding in December. The White House says Trump ordered federal aid to supplement state, tribal and local recovery efforts. The White House said Wednesday the federal funding is available on a cost-sharing basis for emergency work and the repair or replacement of facilities damaged by the severe winter storm and flooding that hit Josephine and Lane counties Dec. 14-17. Oregon Office of Emergency Management Director Andrew Phelps said in a statement Friday the disaster declaration will provide much-needed financial assistance to the two counties. Gov. Kate Brown had requested the Presidential Disaster Declaration. The storm caused more than $16 million in damage, including to hundreds of miles of publicly owned power lines

Brown said in her written opinion that the 12 jurors and six alternates will be devoting an extraordinary amount of time to jury service and adding petty offenses to their plate is not warranted. The trial stems from last winter's armed takeover of the refuge in southeastern Oregon. In a trial last fall, jurors found standoff leader Ammon Bundy and six others not guilty of felony charges. Despite the loss, prosecutors decided to press ahead with a February trial for the seven remaining defendants. They changed their strategy by adding misdemeanor charges such as trespassing to the mix.

Bend museum now a Smithsonian Institution affiliate

BEND (AP) — An Oregon museum has been selected as a Smithsonian Affiliate, allowing it to access exhibits and artifacts from the world's largest museum and research complex. Dana Whitelaw, executive director of the High Desert Museum near Bend, tells The Bulletin that the Smithsonian affiliation will allow the wildlife and history museum to supplement its exhibits by borrowing artifacts from the massive Smithsonian Institution. It will also expand access to training and conferences.

Smithsonian Affiliations director Harold Closter says the organization looks at the quality of a museum's facilities, the training and professionalism of its staff and its mission to educate the public when considering museums for affiliation. Closter says the affiliation helps the Smithsonian Institution by providing a physical presence in museums outside of Washington, D.C.

HERMISTON Snow removal costs street department $50K

East Oregonian

"Clearing snow from 180 miles worth of city streets takes a lot of time and resources." — Ron Sivey, street superintendent

Battling the snow and ice this winter has cost the city of Hermiston's street department $50,000 since Dec. 16. "Clearing snow from 180 miles worth of city streets takes a lot of time and resources," Ron Sivey, street superintendent, said in a news release. "We do everything we can to clear streets as fast as possible with the equipment and personnel available to us." Costs include $32,844 for 782 hours of regular and overtime labor, $6,000 in snow plow repairs, $7,979 for 410 cubic yards of rock and $3,400 for 3,400 gallons of de-icer. During or after a snowfall expected to be more than two inches, crews move through three phases. The first phase is to clear main thoroughfares through the city that are most heavily used. Phase two moves snow plows onto hill routes and downtown commercial areas, plus moves them back to "phase one" routes to clear them again if more snow has fallen. City personnel are also deployed to municipal buildings, the airport and public parking lots. During phase three crews move into residential areas, where they move counterclockwise through neighborhoods.

Jurors won't hear lesser charges in next refuge trial

PORTLAND (AP) — Jurors in the second Malheur National Wildlife Refuge trial will only consider felony charges against the defendants. U.S. District Judge Anna Brown ruled Thursday that misdemeanor charges will be heard in a separate trial before a judge.
