Injured man crawls for help after fishing accident

A Bingham Springs man who broke his leg during a fishing expedition in February 1917 displayed nerves of steel and lusty lungs when he was forced to crawl for help through deep snow to find shelter and medical attention.

Lou Bulin set out on a quest for big trout Feb. 16, 1917, despite the five feet of snow on the ground in the Blue Mountains near his home at Bingham Springs. While trying to jump over the stream at about 3 p.m. he slipped, and when he fell he struck a rock so hard it broke two bones of one leg. Bulin was two miles from the springs and the nearest assistance, so he broke up his fishing pole for a splint and began crawling toward home.

Bulin made slow progress, having to pull himself around a bluff that overhung the river, and only through the desperate strength of his hands and one good leg did he manage to keep himself from falling into the water. After crawling about a mile and a quarter through heavy snow, Bulin was exhausted and suffering tremendously from the cold and the pain, and started calling for help.

Forest Ranger Baker, who lived in a cabin above the springs, and W.W. Hoch at the mountain resort both heard Bulin yelling, but ignored it at first because they thought it was a coyote yipping in the distance. When they finally decided they were hearing a human voice, both grabbed their guns, thinking Bulin had treed an animal. Baker found Bulin first, and left to secure a horse after Hoch arrived and built a fire for the half-frozen man. Baker and Hoch finally managed to get Bulin back to the springs by 9 p.m.

Dr. E.O. Parker of Pendleton was called, and traveled by freight train and horse to arrive at the springs around 1 a.m. Dr. Parker did what he could for Bulin, and transported him to St. Anthony Hospital in Pendleton the next day, where he spent several days recuperating from his ordeal.

When Carl Cyrus, battery man at the Pendleton Auto Co., and Miss Ruth Copeland were quietly married Saturday afternoon, Cyrus didn't inform his friends and coworkers and thought he had "slipped one over." However, they became suspicious and investigated. When Cyrus brought his bride into the auto show Saturday evening, one of his fellow mechanics "lamped" him and announced his presence with a stentorian "Here they are." Immediately the automobile horns began to honk and an impromptu parade formed while the orchestra played the wedding march. Walter McCormmach pinned a "Just Married" sign on the coattails of the bridegroom and in other ways they were advertised. They were game, however, and stayed through the demonstration.

The Henchmen, a four-piece dance combo of Heppner High School students, will enter a "Battle of the Bands" in Richland, Wash., Tuesday. Competition will be among about 20 bands from Washington, Oregon and Idaho during the afternoon. The three top bands will play for a dance that night. The winning band will receive a new wardrobe, a recording session cutting a song written by the group, and performance bookings by a Richland radio station. The Henchmen were hired by the Main Street Cowboys to play for street dances in last fall's Pendleton Round-Up. Members of the group are Kathy Melby, organist; Roger Leonnig, drummer and vocalist; Jim Sherman, lead guitar; and Tim Smith, bass guitar.

Two people were taken to St. Anthony Hospital following a four-car wreck at the Tutuilla stoplight on Southgate in Pendleton at 6:30 p.m. Monday. Ken Smith of Klamath Falls and Deanna Bork of Pendleton were both treated and released. Steven C. Atkins, of Benton City, Wash., was charged with driving under the influence of intoxicants, reckless driving, possession of a controlled substance and two counts of third-degree assault related to the injuries of Smith and Bork. Officer Kelly O'Berg said witnesses stated Atkins ran cars off the road as he entered Pendleton on Highway 395. As he proceeded down Southgate Atkins traveled at least 70 mph. As Atkins approached the stoplight he attempted to drive his pickup between two lanes of stopped traffic and ended up colliding with several vehicles, O'Berg said.

Cheeky tribute: Patriots fan gets Brady tattoo on backside

BOSTON (AP) — Several people came into Boston Barber & Tattoo Co. on the day of New England Patriots Super Bowl victory parade seeking team tattoos, but one request was a little cheekier than the others.

A man, wearing a No. 12 Tom Brady jersey, wanted a likeness of the star quarterback on his backside.

Shop employee Emily Arsenault tells boston.com that the unidentified man told them he had decided the night before that he wanted a Brady tattoo on his left butt cheek.

Tattoo artist Catarina Quintino took two or three hours to get the job done.

After, the man wasn't shy about letting shop employees snap a few photos of the artwork.

Arsenault says the Brady butt tattoo is the most memorable she's seen.
