DEAR ABBY

Daughters blame mom's fiancé for breaking up her marriage

JEANNE PHILLIPS Advice

Dear Abby: My fiancée and I plan to be married next year. I met her after she left her husband because he had cheated on her twice.

the guy who rebuilt an antique truck from the ground up, if you go to any car show featuring restored cars, you can't help but admire the time, energy, skill and commitment some men put into a restoration.

Balance is very important to a successful marriage. Before a wife complains about too much time spent in the "cave" (and not all do complain), she should consider the upside.

Dear Blameless: This is not a question of what "you" should do. It's a question of what you and your fiancée should do together.

Dear Paul: When I put the question about "garaged husbands" out to my readers, they were forthcoming with their views.

While the theory of spending too much time in the garage as a result of being "frozen out of the bedroom" was raised, most readers affirmed the value of having separate time from a spouse.

Both spouses extolled the results produced in the "cave" — restored vintage cars, woodworking items and various repairs.
