Umatilla County Sheriff's Office warns of jury duty scam

PENDLETON — The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office announced it received complaints this week from locals about scam callers trying to solicit money from citizens for missing jury duty.

"The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office has not and will not contact citizens for this purpose or in this manner," the sheriff's office said in a written statement. "Neither the courts nor law enforcement will solicit money from citizens for not showing up for jury duty.' In the recent complaints, the caller claims to be a member of the sheriff's office and tells the potential victim he or she missed jury service and there is a warrant for their arrest. They can avoid jail, however, if they pay a fine immediately or give personal financial information, such as bank account, credit card or Social Security numbers.

Don't provide any personal or financial information to the scammers, the sheriff's office warned, and instead report any suspicious phone calls or possible scams, to local law enforcement.

Red Cross to hold earthquake preparedness session

PENDLETON — The American Red Cross will hold an earthquake preparedness session in Pendleton April 3 to help residents understand and plan for the impact of a Cascadia earthquake. The Prepare Out Loud Presentation is free and open to the public.

The presentation will cover the seismic significance of the Cascadia Subduction Zone, how to find your loved ones after a disaster, how much food, water and supplies to gather beforehand, and what to expect after a major earthquake.

Steve Eberlein will discuss the importance of preparedness. Eberlein was present during the 2004 Boxing Day tsunami in Sri Lanka, which was caused by an underwater subduction zone earthquake. That tsunami resulted in the deaths of nearly 300,000 people in 14 countries.

We know we need to prepare for a disaster and Prepare Out Loud helps people and organizations know where to start," said Von Summers, senior community affairs manager of Northwest Natural.

The presentation will take place Monday, April 3 from 8 to 10 a.m. in the Eastern Oregon Operators Conference, 1601 Westgate, Pendleton. Participants can find more information, and RSVP for the presentation, at www.redcross. org/PrepareOutLoudPendleton.

Sheriff Rowan wades into ACLU immigration policy

Rowan

By PHIL WRIGHT East Oregonian

Umatilla County Sheriff Terry Rowan worked to reassure concerned citizens from opposite sides of the political spectrum his office is following Oregon law when it comes to dealing with foreign nationals.

Getting through the Thursday night town hall meeting in the community room at the Pendleton Public Library took a meandering course in which audience members at times all but shouted at each other about the rolls immigrants serve in the community.

Miriam Gilmer of Adams organized the event for People Power, the American Civil Liberties Union's new grassroots effort to harness nationwide resistance to President Donald Trump's executive orders on immigration. People Power seeks to make sure local governments and law enforcement agencies have or will implement nine policies ranging from requiring U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement to show warrants for local police to hold an individual to preventing officers from taking action against someone only based on their race, religion, language or immigration status.

Rowan told the 25 people in attendance his office's policies and procedures are consistent with the nine at almost every point, and while he supports the federal immigration agency's Priority Enforcement Program to have state and local police identify foreign nationals, "it is indefensible "for the agency not to obtain a legal warrant for their arrest and custody.

Oregon jails require that, he said, in the wake of the 2014 federal court ruling that found Clackamas County violated a woman's Fourth Amendment rights for holding her only at the request of ICE. If someone sues a county jail for carrying out an ICE detainer, he said, the federal agency not help with the lawsuit.

Rowan said ICE and the rest of law enforcement should not focus on working people not committing crimes but should focus on people here to break the law. That comment started a flurry of response from the audience.

One man asked how could an "illegal alien who runs the risk of the law has constitutional rights?" Another person asked if Rowan saw an increase in deportations for minor offenses, which he said he hadn't.

As he tired to plow through each of the nine points, more comments and questions came. One man raised his voice and asked who would pick crops if there were no illegal aliens in the county. Another who said he was a farmer responded loudly that was the situation now, and farmers who change to machines can harvest.

It continued like that for a while, and more than 45 minutes into the meeting Rowan had made it through almost three points before the group settled down. He then clicked the rest off the list in short order, often saying Oregon law already accounts for the policy, or the sheriff's office does not conduct surveillance based on a person's race, for example.

Yet he also sometimes stopped short of saying whether or not his agency has specific policies.

Gilmer on Friday said she found the meeting worthwhile, and she has more work planned. Tuesday night her group plans to address the Pendleton City Council to ask if it would discuss the nine points at its April 4 meeting. She said the organization might ask the city council to adopt the nine policies.

Then Wednesday at 1:15 p.m., Pendleton Police Chief Stuart Roberts will address the group at a town hall meeting at Sister's Cafe, 380 S. Main St., Pendleton.
