in the top of the seventh the Mustangs rallied one more time.

A ground out, Correa single and fly out gave them one on with two outs, but Taylor Hamby kept them alive with a single and Morgan Orem was hit by a pitch to load to bases and bring up DeLoach, who also pitched a complete game and finished 3 for 5 at the plate. Correa (3 for 4) and Dakota Durfey (2 for 4) also had multiple hits in the second game, and Heppner totaled 31 for the afternoon.

ECHO 4, BONANZA 0 - At Echo, a strong performance from Echo pitchers Kenzie Gonzales and Alyssa Ray boosted the Cougars to a shutout 4-0 non-league victory over Bonanza on ### Thursday.

Gonzales got the win for Echo (2-2) as she allowed just one hit and four walks with six strikeouts over 5 2/3 innings in the circle. Ray pitched 1 1/3 innings for the save, giving up just one walk with three strikeouts.

Echo coach Javier Garcia said that Gonzales' only hit allowed was in the first inning, and that she found success in the circle by not pitching scared.

"The first pitch strike is always key and she was aggressive there," Garcia said. "She pitched to contact and our infield stayed busy."

gave Gonzales also herself a cushion in the first inning as she drove in a pair of runs with a double, which proved to be all the support she would need. Also having solid days at the plate were Kendra Hart (2 for 2 with 2 singles) and Monique Montoya (2 for 3, RBI). UP NEXT

Federer to semis, Wozniacki makes Miami final

By TIM REYNOLDS Associated Press

Tennis

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. - Roger Federer's run at the Miami Open was one point from ending. Down 6-4 in a third-set tiebreaker to Tomas Berdych, the situation was officially dire.

Yet even in that moment, Federer still felt some hope. "I had belief I could turn it around, even then," he said.

Somehow, he was right, and his stellar start to 2017 continued. The fourth-seeded Federer fought off those two match points and beat the 10th-seeded Berdych 3-6, 7-6 (6) in the 6-2, quarterfinals on Thursday - avenging a third-set tiebreak loss to Berdych at Key Biscayne seven years ago in a match he still thinks he should have won.

"I got incredibly lucky," Federer said. "Could have gone either way. Felt like maybe this one I should have lost."

Federer feels right at home at Key Biscayne, and so does Caroline Wozniacki — with good reason, since she sometimes practices at the facility. The 12th-seeded Wozniacki, a part-time South Florida resident, made the women's final for the first time in 10 tries by topping second-seeded Karolina Pliskova 5-7, 6-1, 6-1.

Wozniacki will play No.

10 Johanna Konta in Saturday's championship match. Konta topped No. 11 Venus Williams 6-4, 7-5 in the second semifinal, one that ended just after midnight.

"This is one of the few tournaments where I've never made a finals," Wozniacki said. "I think my best result here was semifinals five years ago. It's always been a tournament where I wouldn't say I struggle, but I've just not had the results I wanted."

Federer improved to 17-1 this year and will face No. 12 Nick Kyrgios in the semifinals on Friday.

Kyrgios defeated 16th-seeded Alexander Zverev 6-4, 6-7 (9), 6-3 in the last of the men's quarters. a match that lasted 2 1/2hours. Kyrgios had 16 aces, no double faults and never faced a break point, though his 19-year-old opponent saved five match points before falling.

Like Federer, Wozniacki rallied, albeit with far less drama. She won 12 of the last 14 games.

"I got a good start to the second set and that kind of got me fired up," Wozniacki said.

This will be the second consecutive time two doubledigit seeds make the women's final at Key Biscayne, after No. 13 Victoria Azarenka beat No. 15 Svetlana Kuznetsova a year ago.

Rockets: Expect to get big man Montrezl Harrell back in the lineup Friday, when they face the Golden State Warriors, after he attended to the birth of his child. Rockets coach Mike D'Antoni praised Harrell for how he has handled being the team's third center. "You can sweet-talk it, but reality is what it is and he's accepted it," D'Antoni said. "He keeps working with John Lucas, keeps getting better. He's trying to improve his 3-point shooting. That way we can move him over to the 4 some. If he can do that, that will open up some space for him. I have nothing but good things to say about him. He's been terrific." ... D'Antoni said the Rockets plan to rest backup center Nene on Friday.

Blazers: They've impressed D'Antoni, who praised his coaching counterpart, Terry Stotts, saying the Blazers are a much different team than the one they faced on Nov. 27. "Nurkic has helped give them new life," D'Antoni said. "They're a lot different now, they're a lot better right now. Terry has done a great job, as he always does. This is really good what he's done.'

He's hardly one-dimensional: Knight also recently contributed $500 million to build Oregon's applied sciences research center, one-upping himself on the $400 million he gave to Stanford, where he studied business, to establish a gradschool scholarship program.

But his biggest footprint has come in sports, where the company he co-founded five-plus decades ago is a leader in dozens of areas, not the least of which are basketball shoes and apparel.

No surprise, then, that it was Oregon that first took a chance with a wide-ranging palette of get-your-sun-glasses-out uniforms, all in neon-shaded hues of the school colors - green and gold. These days, dozens of schools feature those sort of

It may not come as a coincidence that Under Armour into Oregon's programs throughout the 2000s.

In 2001, Oregon reset the template on how to market a Heisman Trophy candidate, while also increasing its national profile, by spending $250,000 to splash quarterback Joey Harrington's likeness on a 10-story billboard in Times Square. "Joey Heisman," the sign read. From there, things only got bigger. Among Knight's investments were $30 million toward renovating the scoreboard at Autzen Stadium, $41.7 million for an academic center for athletes and $68 million toward a new football training facility.

The details are painstaking:

The lettering on the marquee spells out "Matt" in a Japanese-inspired Torii gate shape," according to the arena website .

There's artwork outside the arena and fan-tribute displays on the concourse.

The floor, emblazoned with the "Matt" logo set above the words "Deep in the Woods" is designed with the silhouette of a Pacific Coast tree line, in honor of Oregon's 1939 title team, known as The Tall Firs .

Plum, the 5-foot-7 Washthe 33 votes for the award after dominating college basketball throughout her senior season. She broke the career NCAA scoring mark, topping Jackie Stiles' 16-year old record in style with a 57-point effort on her senior night. She finished her career with 3,498 points and helped lead Washington to the Final Four as a junior before seeing her career end in the regional semifinals

She is the first player from the school to win the award.
