Trump doubles down on criticism of court that halted first travel ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Donald Trump is once again taking aim at a federal appeals court district that covers Western states, saying he is considering breaking up a circuit that is a longtime target of Republicans and is where his first travel ban was halted.

Yet it would take congressional action to break up the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Republicans have introduced bills this year to do just that.

Asked Wednesday during a White House interview by the Washington Examiner if he'd thought about proposals to break up the court, Trump replied, "Absolutely, I have."

"There are many people that want to break up the 9th Circuit. It's outrageous," he told the Examiner. He accused critics of appealing to the 9th "because they know that's like, semi-automatic."

The comments echoed his Twitter criticism of the court Wednesday morning.

Democratic Congressmen John Conyers Jr. of Michigan and Jerrold Nadler of New York, members of the House Judiciary Committee, responded in a statement Thursday that Trump would "rather attack the judiciary than defend his inhumane and unconstitutional executive orders."

"The Muslim ban is unconstitutional, the so-called 'sanctuary cities' order is unlawful, and the path forward on these issues does not involve recycling a tired proposal to dismantle the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals," the congressmen said.

Trump called U.S. District Judge William Orrick's preliminary injunction against his order stripping money from so-called sanctuary cities "ridiculous" on Twitter. He said he planned to take that case to the Supreme Court. However, an administration appeal of the district court's decision must go first to the 9th Circuit.

Republicans have talked for years about splitting the circuit into two appellate courts, but earlier legislative proposals have failed, most recently in 2005. Those battles have often pitted lawmakers from California against members from smaller, more conservative states.

Critics say the court has a liberal slant, a high caseload and distances that are too far for judges to travel. The circuit is the largest of the federal appellate courts, representing 20 percent of the U.S. population. It includes California, Alaska, Hawaii, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands.

The circuit has 29 judicial positions, many more than the 5th, which is the next largest circuit with 17. The 9th Circuit was created in 1891 when the American West was much less populated.

Democrats have opposed the split. Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California was a leading opponent in the 2005 push, which she said was politically motivated. She has suggested adding judges to the court instead.

In March, 9th Circuit judges appointed by both Democratic and Republican presidents told lawmakers that breaking up the court was a bad idea.

The 9th Circuit in February refused to immediately reinstate Trump's ban on travelers from seven predominantly Muslim nations, prompting the administration to release a new, narrower ban. That also has been held up by the courts.

Pope warns powerful to act humbly or risk ruin

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Francis is warning the powerful to act humbly or risk ruin, using the first-ever papal TED talk to urge the world to show more solidarity with the poor and the weak.

Francis delivered a videotaped talk to a TED conference in Vancouver on "The Future You." TED, short for Technology, Entertainment and Design, organizes conferences around the world aiming to spread ideas through short talks.

The Vatican released the video Wednesday. In it, Francis outlined his vision of the interconnectedness of humanity, saying that with age he has grown increasingly convinced that "none of us is an island."

"Please allow me to say it loud and clear: The more powerful you are, the more your actions will have an impact on people, the more you are called to be humble," he said. "If you don't, your power will ruin you, and you will ruin others."

He cited a saying from his native

Argentina about the effects of drinking gin on an empty stomach: "You feel dizzy, you get drunk, you lose your balance and you will end up hurting yourself and those around you if you don't connect your power with humility and tenderness."

Francis pleaded for greater solidarity in political, economic and scientific endeavors.

"How wonderful would it be, while we discover faraway planets, to rediscover the needs of the brothers and sisters orbiting around us," he said. "How wonderful would it be if solidarity — this beautiful and sometimes inconvenient word — were not simply reduced to social work and became instead the default attitude in political, economic and scientific choices."

Francis' participation in the TED conference marked a new era for the Vatican's communications operation, which has increasingly sought to get the pope's message out via social media and nontraditional news sources.

The reaction in Rome was positive.

"These days, communications and the Ted Talks are very powerful," Bob Livingstone, a tourist from Brisbane, Australia said after Francis' Wednesday general audience in St. Peter's Square. "Every politician does (it) and he is a politician for the church."

Group warms the soul with quilting outreach

East Oregonian

Members of the Pendleton First Christian Church are serious about helping and serving others in need in the community.

As part of its mission, the Faithful Comfort Crafters come together to create quilts for people needing warmth and comfort. Since forming in 2009, the group has given away more than 250 handcrafted quilts.

"The Lord gives us all time, talents, and treasures, and challenges each of us to use our gifts wisely," said Melissa Woodbury. "We are using our time and talents to create something that shows God's love for all people."

Some of the quilt recipients include local students identified by school counselors as needing additional warmth and love. In October, 22 quilts were given to students at Sunridge Middle School.

Also, every girl who stays at Tonya's House in Pendleton receives a quilt because of the mission that was started by the FCC group. Others receiving quilts include patients and clients of Davita Dialysis Center, Pioneer Relief Nursery, Domestic Violence Services and "anyone else who needs the love we have to offer," Woodbury said.

In December, the Giving Tree at Hamley's included a request for a blanket. The quilters made and donated a quilt, following their informal motto: "Blankets can warm the body, but quilts can warm the soul."

The group uses an annual pie sale to pay for quilt batting, and fabric is donated by quilters in the area. Thimbles Fabric-N-More allows the group to use their long arm quilting machine and connects the group with others in town that want to help finish the quilts.

The group invites all community members who want to help to join them. The Faithful Comfort Crafters meet the second and fourth Friday of each month at 9 a.m. in the fellowship hall at the Pendleton First Christian Church, 215 N. Main.

For more information, call Woodbury at 541-215-5077 or Penny Gavette at 541-276-7855.
