Train conductor welcomes new passenger at 40 mph conductor for the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company (O.R. & N.) in May of 1903 was flustered when a baby boy made a surprise appearance on a regular run from Pendleton to Portland.

The No. 5 train left Pendleton on May 27, 1903, under the direction of Conductor Maher. Maher was feeling pretty good about the run, which was on time and running smoothly at about 40 mph. Checking his tickets, he noticed nothing unusual about the passengers.

Near Troutdale, however, about 30 minutes outside of Portland, Maher was approached by an elderly gentleman who turned out to be a doctor. The man told him that a woman in the chair car, a Mrs. Sears from Sumpter, was in a "delicate situation" and would be adding another passenger to Maher's list in very short order

At first Maher was horrified, and then annoyed, that Mrs. Sears' impending delivery might ruin his perfect run by creating a delay. Then Maher was furious at Conductor Nash, who had turned Mrs. Sears over to his care in Pendleton without giving him a heads-up about her condition, but soon realized it was not Nash's fault. Maher dithered about asking the advice of the train's engineer, Jim Randall, as he usually did when he had a perplexing problem, but realized that Randall had no experience with childbirth, either his wife generally took care of that sort of thing while Randall was away from Maher finally decided he would talk to Mrs. Sears in hopes that she could be persuaded to wait to deliver until they arrived in Portland; she had waited all this time, certainly she could wait another 25 minutes? But by the time Maher had decided to iust make the best of the situation, news came that a 10-pound baby boy had joined the passenger list.

Mother and child were made as comfortable as possible, and the other passengers were so impressed with the graceful handling of the incident that they assured Maher they would not hesitate to entrust themselves to the O.R. & N. in a similar situation.

100 Years Ago From the East Oregonian May 20-21, 1917

After a weekend of uncertainty, Pendleton's cavalry troop today looks like an assured thing and recruiting is proceeding busily at the recruiting office in the city hall. This morning a total of 62 had signed the agreement to enlist and Captain Gjedsted felt certain that there would be eight more put in appearance within the next day. It is almost imperative that the peace strength of 70 be reached by tomorrow. Adjutant General White telegraphed Captain Gjedsted yesterday morning that the full number must be secured by evening and that all must come from Pendleton. This order prevented the cowboys from going out over the country for their friends and the prospects looked dubious until last evening when one cowboy, unknown, went out and signed up 18 by himself.

They've added another "R" to three "Rs" at Blue Mountain Community College in Pendleton. It's "riding." BMCC, overlooks which world-famous Pendleton Round-Up grounds, is teaching students how to ride horses as part of a unique physical education course. Taught by Lou Levy, widely known local horseman, the program was initiated in March with 20 students enrolled in both western and English riding. One of the pupils is Susan Olsen, this year's Round-Up queen. Another is Sheila Mabry, one of Susan's princesses. They are brushing up for this year's Round-Up.

Two computers valued at $3,000 were stolen from Stanfield Elementary School Monday night, Stanfield Police Chief Tim Adams said. The Apple computers and related equipment were taken from fourth- and fifthgrade classrooms, he said. The burglar broke a window that couldn't be seen from the street and exited with the equipment through door, and Adams said it appears the burglar knew something about the school since the computers in the library and office, both of which have alarm systems, were not stolen.

Associated Press

ROUND ROCK, Texas - A Texas man is suing a woman he went on a date with for the price of a movie ticket after he says she texted through the film and left him at the theater.

Brandon Vezmar filed the claim for $17.31 last week. The 37-year-old tells the Austin American-Statesman he met the woman online and they went to see "Guardians of the Galaxy, Vol. 2" on May 6. He says the 35-year-old woman refused to stop texting. Vezmar says he suggested she step outside to text. The woman then left the theater and never returned

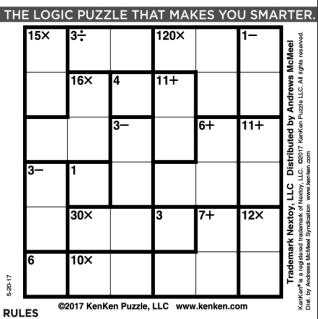

The woman tells the newspaper Vezmar asked her later for the cost of the ticket, but she refused because "he took me out on a date.'
