Man charged for impersonating police officer to scare school bully

CENTRAL POINT (AP) — An Oregon businessman has been accused of impersonating a police officer to scare off a school bully.

The Mail Tribune reports 45-year-old Leif Reed Johnson had pleaded not guilty Thursday to two felony counts of criminal impersonation of a peace officer.

Central Point police say Johnson had gone to a child's front door twice posing as an officer. Police say he had told the girl he "was investigating a case involving bullying and threats made on a school bus."

Johnson said he couldn't comment on the case on the advice of his lawyer, but he said he believed the whole situation had been "blown out of proportion."

Two teens charged over nude photos at Eugene high school

EUGENE (AP) — Two teenagers face felony charges after police found sexually explicit photos of girls who attend North Eugene High School.

A probable-cause affidavit filed this week says the police investigation began in February, after a student told an officer that one of the teens had shown her nude photos of numerous female classmates that he had on an iPod.

Detective Chris Mackay wrote that the young man subsequently allowed the officer to view images on the iPod, and police found thousands of photos along with videos.

The Register-Guard reports one defendant is charged with using a child in a display of sexually explicit conduct. The other was arraigned Thursday on a charge of second-degree encouraging child sexual abuse.

Cyclist who says he was wrongfully arrested files lawsuit

PORTLAND (AP) — A cyclist who says he was knocked down by police officer while following the officer's orders is suing an Oregon city.

The Oregonian/OregonLive reports 23-year-old Anthony Allen filed a $475,000 lawsuit against the city of Portland Wednesday. His attorney claims Allen, who is black, was racially profiled. The suit says he was wrongfully arrested by Portland police while they searched for a suspect in a shooting.

According to the suit, Allen was headed toward the curb when the officer knocked him off of his bike and handcuffed him.

The report says the law enforcement officer tried to charge Allen for misdemeanor for refusing to obey a lawful order. He was later acquitted.
