DEAR ABBY

Husband doesn't share wife's dreams of seeing the world

JEANNE PHILLIPS Advice

Dear Abby: I'll be retiring next year. My husband is already retired. When I do, I want to travel in the U.S. and internationally. We are healthy, able to travel and we have the funds to do it.

The problem is, my husband isn't crazy about traveling. He'll go if I book it, but he fusses the whole time until we go. It's not like he has to do anything. I do all the booking and packing. All he has to do is show up.

I told him one of my bucket list items was to live in Mexico for a month. Because I hate cold weather, I want to live somewhere warm.

Can you give me some advice on this matter? Help me change his mind about seeing the world before we are no longer able to. Or do you think I need to find a travel companion? — Bucket List In Virginia

Dear B.L.: You may need to do exactly that, and the way to change your husband's mind about travel might be to say it. Not everyone has wanderlust. If he's a confirmed homebody who regards travel as a punishment instead of a privilege, you should not have to suffer for it.

Dear Abby: My doctor prescribed medication to control my migraines, but I have to take the pills four times a day — at breakfast, lunch, dinner and bedtime. Although I'm not ashamed, I don't want to have to explain why I am taking the medication because I'm afraid there may be a stigma attached to it. I don't know what to do. If I try to vary the times, I end up forgetting to take a pill. What should I do? — Prescribed In San Antonio

Dear Prescribed: Take the medication on time as instructed by your physician. If you need a reminder, program it into your cellphone. There's no more stigma attached to taking medication to prevent headaches than there is in taking it for any other medical reason. If you prefer not to be questioned about it, excuse yourself and do it in the restroom.

Dear Abby: Hi. I have a problem. My best friend is moving away to a different state this summer. School is ending soon. She is my only friend, and I'm currently dating her brother. He's the only boy I like, and she is my only friend. I don't know what to do.

I'll be in ninth grade in a couple of months, which means I'll have to start high school without a best friend or a boyfriend. What should I do? I'll be all alone. — Savannah In Colorado

Dear Savannah: Not quite! A lot of changes occur when students leave the lower grades and start high school. Even established friendships can change. When school begins, many of your classmates will be in exactly the same position as you. If you are friendly, I'm sure you'll find others who will be open to being friendly to you.

DAYS GONE BY

100 Years Ago From the East Oregonian June 1, 1917

Following a preliminary hearing yesterday afternoon in the justice court, A.D. Grieve and son, Brayton, charged with the larceny of a yearling ewe of J.T. Hoskins, were released, Judge Parkes taking the ground that there was not sufficient evidence produced to warrant holding them to the grand jury. They explained their possession of the ewe by stating that it had been left by Hoskins' herder, Walter Ogilvy, near their place because of exhaustion and had joined their own band of lambs. Ogilvy was aware of its presence there, they stated, and had been notified that he had better take it away. As for the other sheep in their possession, they produced evidence showing that they had come by them rightfully.

Drinking, tearing up and messing up a cell in the city jail, and possession of a weapon and lewd photographs cost three young men from Union county $155 plus considerable loss of time because of a short stay in jail. The three were arrested here early Monday and when brought before Municipal Judge Thomas M. Cosgrove were assessed as follows: Herschel Wilford Lambert, 20, La Grande, illegal possession $25, misrepresentation of true age $10, injury to property $50; Donald Gail Millman, 24, Cove, drunk and possession of lewd photos $40; David Eugene Stahl, 18, Cove, illegal possession of liquor and carrying concealed weapon $30.

25 Years Ago From the East Oregonian June 1, 1992

The Springfield Millers boarded the bus Wednesday morning for a high school baseball state playoff trip, but took a wrong turn into a brick wall otherwise known as the Pendleton Bucks. Springfield, which had beaten Southern League champion Crane in the first round, crashed and burned in a 15-1 drubbing at the hands of the Bucks in Wednesday's quarterfinal. Pendleton advances to the semifinals for the first time since 1986 and will clash with the South Salem Saxons.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Today is the 152nd day of 2017. There are 213 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights in History:

It was 50 years ago today — June 1, 1967 — that the Beatles album "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" was released, as was David Bowie's debut album, eponymously titled "David Bowie."

On this date: In 1792, Kentucky became the 15th state.

In 1796, Tennessee became the 16th state.

In 1813, the mortally wounded commander of the USS Chesapeake, Capt. James Lawrence, gave the order, "Don't give up the ship" during a losing battle with the British frigate HMS Shannon in the War of 1812.

In 1868, James Buchanan, the 15th president of the United States, died near Lancaster, Pennsylvania, at age 77.

In 1917, the song "Over There" by George M. Cohan was published by William Jerome Publishing Corp. of New York.

In 1927, Lizzie Borden, accused but acquitted of the 1892 ax murders of her father, Andrew, and her stepmother, Abby, died in Fall River, Massachusetts, at age 66.

In 1943, a civilian flight from Portugal to England was shot down by Germany during World War II, killing all 17 people aboard, including actor Leslie Howard.

In 1957, Don Bowden, a student at the University of California at Berkeley, became the first American to break the four-minute mile during a meet in Stockton, California, in a time of 3:58.7.

In 1977, the Soviet Union formally charged Jewish human rights activist Anatoly Shcharansky with treason. (Shcharansky was imprisoned, then released in 1986; he's now known by the name Natan Sharansky.)

In 1980, Cable News Network made its debut.

In 1997, The Chicago Tribune published a make-believe commencement speech by columnist Mary Schmich which urged graduates to, among other things, "wear sunscreen" (the essay ended up being wrongly attributed online to author Kurt Vonnegut).
