DEAR ABBY

Man's old tryst with wife's yoga teacher causes strain

JEANNE PHILLIPS Advice

Dear Abby: My wife recently started a new yoga class she really likes. But I made the mistake of telling her that the instructor and I had dated briefly (had sex) when we were around 15. I am 50 now and my wife is 45. I was a promiscuous drunk when I was in high school and college. I have been sober now for 28 years, and we have been together for 22 years. I have not been with another woman since I met my wife.

sure she doesn't actually follow this religion, but rather regards it as an entertaining idea. As a Christian, I'm uncomfortable with the theme. Our only choices are to go and make the best of it, or to stay home and have everyone think we are narrow-minded old fuddy-duddies. What should we do? — Challenged In California

Abby, she treats this situation as if I cheated on her yesterday, and this was 35 years ago! Also, after she recognized my wife's last name, the yoga instructor told my wife that I broke her heart back then. Help! — Heartbreaker

Dear Challenged: I'm glad you asked. Go, make the best of it, and refrain from making judgments about your lovely, high-achieving granddaughter's decision about her wedding. Her choice of wedding theme may or may not be a lark. However, if it isn't, Wicca is a peaceful religion. Wiccans do not practice black magic. She will still be the same lovely girl after the wedding as she was before.

Dear Heartbreaker: You have gotten your life in order, and the yoga instructor appears to be doing well. That she's 50 and in good enough shape to be teaching yoga says a lot for her flexibility. Clearly, neither you nor your old high school classmate has been trying to slip anything past your wife. If she really feels threatened because of your long-past relationship with her teacher, she should roll up her mat and find another class.

Dear Abby: My mother-in-law didn't get me a card or even wish me Happy Mother's Day on my very first one. We got together to celebrate, so I don't think she forgot. I thought we had a pretty good relationship, but now I'm not so sure.

Dear Abby: We have a lovely granddaughter who is about to be married to an excellent young man. She is sweet, kind, smart, hardworking, just out of college and everything you would want in a granddaughter. However, we are deeply concerned about her wedding, which will have a Wiccan theme, and they are both planning to change to a last name with Wiccan significance. Although I'm not positive, I'm pretty

Is there a nice way to ask her why she didn't get me a card or even say, "Happy Mother's Day"? I'd like to be able to apologize if she's harboring a grudge for some reason. — New Mom In Tennessee

Dear New Mom: Sometimes it's not what you say, but the way you say it that can create tension. I suggest that when you approach your MIL about this, you do it with a smile and say, "I was surprised when you didn't wish me a Happy Mother's Day. Why was that?" Then LISTEN.

DAYS GONE BY

These cigarette smoking youths of fluctuating ages are up against a tough proposition these days, as is attested by the experience of Dan Quinliban of Athena. Quinliban purchased some cigarettes the other day on the representation that he was 21 years old. He wore a beard and passed easily for that age. When an officer asked him his age, he promptly replied, "21." "Show me your registration certificate," said the officer. "I haven't any," he said. "Alright, the government wants you for being a slacker," said the officer. Then it was that Quinliban did an "about face." He denied he was 21 years old, saying he lacked a few months, and he produced his mother to prove it. He was prosecuted then for smoking cigarettes, Deputy District Attorney Fred Schmidt handling the case before Justice Richards of Athena yesterday. He was let off with a fine of three dollars.

to Tilman Stone, 1001 NW DeSpain Ave., somehow or other left its driveway, rolled out into the street, hit a car owned by Kenneth Bjorklund and operated by Eileen Halsey, and then leaped the curbing and whammed against the porch of the Jack Kehoe place at 914 NW DeSpain. The impact knocked down one of the two supporting columns, and did neither house nor car any good whatever. No one was injured, according to city police, but they also recalled that this is the second time in recent months that the same house has been struck by an automobile.

Favorable weather conditions and a quick response by firefighters has brought a rash of fires in the Umatilla National Forest under control. The forest reported 23 small lightning-caused fires Friday morning after a storm passed overhead Thursday evening. Two additional fires were detected Friday. But substantial rain — more than half an inch in some areas — aided firefighters who responded from as far away as Redmond and Salem.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Today is the 165th day of 2017. There are 200 days left in the year. This is Flag Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 14, 1777, the Second Continental Congress approved the design of the original American flag, declaring: "Resolved, that the Flag of the thirteen United States shall be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation."

On this date: In 1775, the Continental Army, forerunner of the United States Army, was created.

In 1801, former American Revolutionary War general and notorious turncoat Benedict Arnold died in London.

In 1922, Warren G. Harding became the first president heard on radio, as Baltimore station WEAR broadcast his speech dedicating the Francis Scott Key memorial at Fort McHenry.

In 1934, Max Baer

defeated Primo Carnera with an 11th round TKO to win the world heavyweight boxing championship in Long Island City, New York.

In 1940, German troops entered Paris during World War II; the same day, the Nazis began transporting prisoners to the Auschwitz concentration camp in German-occupied Poland.

In 1943, the U.S. Supreme Court, in West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, ruled 6-3 that children in public schools could not be forced to salute the flag of the United States.

In 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a measure adding the phrase "under God" to the Pledge of Allegiance.

In 1972, the Environmental Protection Agency ordered a ban on domestic use of the pesticide DDT, to take effect at year's end.

In 1992, Mona Van Duyn became the first woman to be named the nation's Poet Laureate by the Library of Congress.
