More FBI agents remain under investigation for Finicum shooting

By CONRAD WILSON
Oregon Public Broadcasting

FBI Special Agent W. Joseph Astarita was arraigned in federal court in Portland this week for his role in the shooting death of a leader in last year's Malheur National Wildlife Refuge occupation. But quickly passed over in a post-arraignment press conference Wednesday was potentially more significant news: Other members of the FBI's hostage rescue team are still under investigation. Officials confirmed to OPB on Thursday that those investigations remain ongoing. Astarita faces five charges, ranging from making false statements to obstruction of justice. A spokesperson for the FBI said Thursday that he is still with the agency and serving in an "administrative capacity." That spokesperson declined to elaborate further. On Jan. 26, 2016, at least five members of the FBI's elite hostage rescue team assisted during the attempted arrest of Arizona rancher Robert "LaVoy" Finicum and other occupation leaders along a remote stretch of Oregon highway between

Burns and John Day. Finicum had served as a spokesman for the refuge occupiers. Law enforcement officials say Astarita fired two shots during the arrest attempt. "One of the gun shots hit the roof of Finicum's pickup," Deschutes County Sheriff Shane Nelson said Wednesday during a news conference in Portland. Astarita allegedly did not disclose those shots to investigators following Finicum's death, which is the basis for the charges against him. He pleaded not guilty. The FBI and investigating law enforcement agencies have declined to identify the other four agents who were on the scene. The FBI spokesman also declined to discuss whether they were still members of HRT or, like Astarita, had been moved to an "administrative capacity." During Wednesday's news conference, Nelson said investigators not only uncovered the alleged actions of Astarita, but also "the subsequent concerning actions of some members of the FBI hostage rescue team." Nelson said again Thursday that his office is continuing its investigation into the actions of the FBI agents present during the arrest attempt. But Nelson wouldn't say whether he expected additional charges to be filed. "We'll just go where the evidence leads us," he said. More than a year ago, Nelson traveled to Washington, D.C., to meet with now acting FBI Director Andrew McCabe and other U.S. Department of Justice officials to alert them of "possible criminal conduct by some involved FBI HRT agents." About a month ago, Nelson said he learned the agents under investigation were not placed on administrative leave. "I don't know that they've ever been put on administrative leave," Nelson said in an interview Thursday.

Corrections

In the story "Oregon Legislature passes worker scheduling bill" (June 30, 1A) the Associated Press reported erroneously that a worker scheduling bill affects workers in hospitals. The bill affects workers in the hospital industry, among others, but not hospitals. The East Oregonian works hard to be accurate and sincerely regrets any errors.
