Authorities: Wanted man fled with underage girl

KLAMATH FALLS (AP) — An Oregon man wanted for beating his underage girlfriend and shooting another man while looking for her is believed to have run off with the girl after locating her at a safe house in Washington state.

The Herald and News reported Thursday the 17-year-old girl is believed to have voluntarily left the safe house on Saturday with 35-year-old Charles Irwin Jackson.

Jackson is accused of beating the girl at their residence in Agency Lake then shooting a neighbor in the leg while searching for her after she escaped.

He is being sought on suspicion of attempted murder, first-degree assault, second-degree assault and third-degree rape.

He and the girl are believed to be riding in a black 1998 GMC pickup truck. Authorities say Jackson has a history of being armed and eluding police.

Police searching for mother of missing toddler

ASHLAND (AP) — Oregon authorities are looking for a woman who they believe kidnapped her toddler daughter.

The Mail Tribune reports the girl was taken from her father's home in Ashland late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

An Ashland police Facebook post says 43-year-old Shelley Dahlstrom is wanted for custodial interference, first-degree burglary and contempt of court. Chief Tighe O'Meara says Dahlstrom does not have any parental rights.

She is believed to be driving a red 1997 Ford Explorer with license plate number OR 805 FNY.

Corrections deputy misled chief about relationship

SALEM (AP) — An internal investigation carried out by the Oregon Department of Corrections has found that a former administrator lied to the agency chief when confronted last year about a sexual relationship with another employee.

Kim Brockamp abruptly quit her post as deputy director of the Department of Corrections last fall, citing "work-life balance" concerns, The Oregonian/OregonLive reported. She quit shortly after John Myrick, a former prison administrator, accused her of inappropriately intervening in disciplinary decisions, engaging in a sexual relationship with another employee and using her position to influence promotion decisions.

The agency's Director of Human Resources John Nees carried out the investigation and found no evidence of the discipline and promotion allegations, but did find that Brockamp lied about a sexual relationship with an employee.

Nees said he relied on interviews with Brockamp and other administrators, as well as agency records in drawing his conclusions.

The agency oversees 14,500 inmates at 14 institutions. Brockamp was hired in March as a manager at the Oregon Department of Education.

Woman sentenced to prison for baseball bat attack

KLAMATH FALLS (AP) — A 25-year-old woman accused of striking another woman with a baseball bat has been sentenced to 2.5 years in prison after pleading no contest to attempted assault.

Alichia Lyn Marie Stout was arrested nearly two months ago in Klamath Falls. Police said Stout struck the victim with the bat and a closed fist during a dispute about noise levels from a stereo.

The Herald and News reports the victim suffered a laceration on her head.

Stout lives just across the state line in Maccdoel, California. Before accepting a plea deal, she faced an assault charge that carried a minimum sentence of nearly six years in prison.
