

PUBLIC SAFETY LOG

FRIDAY

9:33 a.m. - A man in Irrigon called and asked the Morrow County Sheriff's Office not to tow his fifth-wheel trailer, which the law enforcement agency tagged for removal. He said he would remove it Friday or Saturday. The dispatch center told him the on-duty deputy would have to decide to leave or tow it, and if the deputy decides against towing on Friday, the man would have to remove it by Saturday or it would be "towed no matter what."

3:21 p.m. - An anonymous caller told the Morrow County Sheriff's Office a Boardman company's supervisor is working under a fake name. The deputy contacted the company's human resources department, which is looking into the situation.

4:36 p.m. - Residents on Northwest 13th Street, Hermiston, complained to police about the neighbor's dogs, which bark consistently, coming over to their property.

9:56 p.m. - An employee of the Riverside Sports Bar & Lounge, 1501 Sixth St., Umatilla, reported an assault at the establishment.

10:07 p.m. - The Morrow County Sheriff's Office received a report of males fighting at Southeast Division Street and Northeast Main Avenue, Irrigon.

10:08 p.m. - Law enforcement received a 9-1-1 call about a fight at Umatilla High School, 1460 Seventh St., Umatilla.

11:16 p.m. - Pendleton police responded to Mosa, 140 S. Main St., Pendleton, for a fight at the bar.

SATURDAY

9:29 a.m. - Irrigon residents on Northwest Washington Avenue reported they own a goat, and the neighbor's dogs are trying to get to the animal. The callers also said they went to court against these neighbors after the dogs last year killed their goat.

12:24 p.m. - Pendleton police received a report of graffiti on the sign at Washington Elementary School, 1205 S.E. Byers Ave.

12:51 p.m. - A caller reported suspicious circumstances and possible illegal lodging at Lind and Bensch roads, Hermiston.

7:41 p.m. - Two males were fighting at McKay Creek Estates, 1601 Southgate Place, Pendleton, a caller reported. Police did not find any suspects.

10:12 p.m. - Hermiston police received a report of a male armed with a knife on Northwest 11th Street.

SUNDAY

4:49 a.m. - A Pendleton resident on Southeast Goodwin Avenue told police he just arrived home and found a male asleep on his couch, and he has no idea who this person is.

1:54 p.m. - Pendleton police took a report of a vehicle theft at Southwest Third Street and Emigrant Avenue.

7:07 p.m. - Hermiston police received a report of a dog locked in a car. Oregon law now allows someone to use force to enter a vehicle to remove a child or domestic animal in imminent danger of suffering harm.

ARRESTS, CITATIONS

•Oregon State Police at about 10:40 p.m. responded to a complaint about a yellow Ford pickup speeding recklessly on Highway 11. A trooper spotted the vehicle, saw it was driving in and out of the lane and checked the speed at 91 mph. Most of that highway is 55 mph.

The trooper stopped the Ford Ranger and saw the driver, Cody James Ford, 24, of Echo, was impaired, and arrested him for DUII (alcohol), reckless driving, and recklessly endangering another.

One dead in farming accident

East Oregonian

A Walla Walla man died Saturday in a farming accident near Milton-Freewater, according to the Umatilla County Sheriff's Office.

Dominic Ferraro, 35, was driving a tractor-baler combination around 8 a.m. during alfalfa baling operations at Adolf Klein Farms when he lost control of the tractor. Ferraro tried to jump from the moving vehicle, but did not clear the machine and was killed. Umatilla County Undersheriff Jim Littlefield said Ferraro was pronounced dead by emergency services at the scene.

Oregon's Occupational Safety and Health Administration took over the investigation.

Pulitzer-winning playwright Sam Shepard dead at 73

By JAKE COYLE
AP Film Writer

NEW YORK — Sam Shepard, the Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright, Oscar-nominated actor and celebrated author whose plays chronicled the explosive fault lines of family and masculinity in the American West, has died. He was 73.

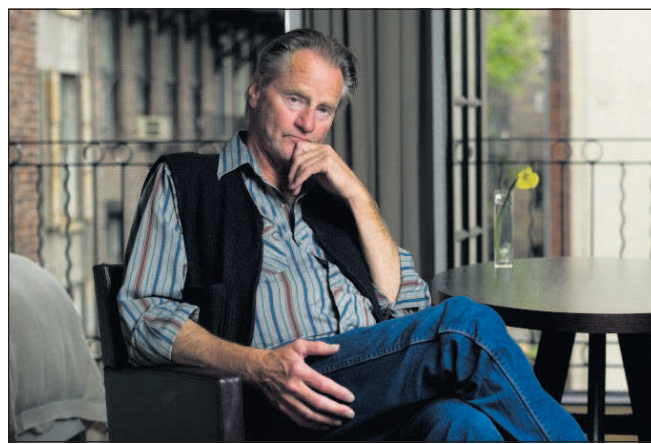

Family spokesman Chris Boneau said Monday that Shepard died Thursday at his home in Kentucky from complications related to Lou Gehrig's disease, or amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

The taciturn Shepard, who grew up on a California ranch, was a man of few words who nevertheless produced 44 plays and numerous books, memoirs and short stories. He was one of the most influential playwrights of his generation: a plain-spoken poet of the modern frontier, both lyrical and rugged.

In his 1971 one-act "Cowboy Mouth," which he wrote with his then-girlfriend, musician and poet Patti Smith, one character says, "People want a street angel. They want a saint but with a cowboy mouth" — a role the tall and handsome Shepard fulfilled for many. But in soul-searching plays, his portrait of the West was a disillusioned one, peopled by broken characters whose realities fell far short of the American Dream.

"I was writing basically for actors," Shepard told The Associated Press in a 2011 interview. "And actors immediately seemed to have a handle on it, on the rhythm of it, the sound of it, the characters. I started to understand there was this possibility of conversation between actors and that's how it all started."

Shepard's Western drawl and laconic presence made him a reluctant movie star, too. He appeared in dozens of films — many of them Westerns — including Terrence Malick's "Days of Heaven," "Steel Magnolias," "The Assassination of Jesse James by the Coward Robert Ford" and 2012's "Mud." He was nominated for an Oscar for his performance as pilot Chuck Yeager in 1983's "The Right Stuff." Among his most recent roles was the Florida Keys patriarch of the Netflix series "Bloodline."

But Shepard was best remembered for his influential plays and his prominent role in the Off-Off-Broadway movement. His 1979 play "Buried Child," about the breaking down of an Illinois family, won the Pulitzer for drama. Two other plays — "True West," about two warring brothers, and "Fool for Love," about a man who fears he's turning into his father — were nominated for the Pulitzers as well. All are frequently revived.

"I always felt like playwrighting was the thread through all of it," Shepard said in 2011. "Theater really when you think about it contains everything. It can contain film. Film can't contain theater. Music. Dance. Painting. Acting. It's the whole deal. And it's the most ancient. It goes back to the Druids. It was way pre-Christ. It's the form that I feel most at home in, because of that, because of its ability to usurp everything."

Samuel Shepard Rogers VII was born in Fort Sheridan, Illinois, in 1943. He grew up on an avocado ranch in Duarte, California. His father was an alcoholic schoolteacher and former Army pilot. Shepard would later write frequently of the damage done by drunks. He had his own struggles, too. Long stretches of sobriety were interrupted by drunk driving arrests, in 2009 and 2015.

Shepard arrived in New York in 1963 with no connections, little money and vague aspirations to act, write or make music. "I just dropped in out of nowhere," he told The New Yorker in 2010. But Shepard quickly became part of the off-off-Broadway movement at downtown hangouts like Caffè Cino and La MaMa. "As far as I'm concerned, Broadway just does not exist," Shepard told Playboy in 1970 — though many of his later plays would end up there.

His early plays — fiery, surreal verbal assaults — pushed American theater in an energized, frenzied direction that matched the times. A drummer himself, Shepard found his own rock 'n roll rhythm. Seeking spontaneity, he initially refused to rewrite his drafts, a strategy he later dismissed as "just plain stupid."

As Shepard matured as a playwright, he returned again and again to meditations on violence, masculinity and family. His collection "Seven Plays," which includes many of his best plays, including "Buried Child" and "The Tooth of Crime," was dedicated to his father.

"There's some hidden, deeply rooted thing in the Anglo male American that has to do with inferiority, that has to do with not being a man, and always, continually having to act out some idea of manhood that invariably is violent," he told The New York Times in 1984. "This sense of failure runs very deep — maybe it has to do with the frontier being systematically taken away, with the guilt of having gotten this country by wiping out a native race of people, with the whole Protestant work ethic. I can't put my finger on it, but it's the source of a lot of intrigue for me."

Shepard was married from 1969 to 1984 to actress O-Lan Jones, with whom he had son Jesse Mojo Shepard.

His connection to music was constant. He joined Bob Dylan on the 1975 Rolling Thunder Revue tour of 1975, and co-wrote the song "Brownsville Girl" with him. Shepard and Patti Smith were one-time lovers but lifetime friends. "We're just the same," Smith once said. "When Sam and I are together, it's like no particular time."
