Tamástslikt celebrates 19th anniversary

Outdoor living culture village now open

East Oregonian

A colorful new exhibit at Tamástslikt Cultural Institute kicks off a month-long celebration commemorating the museum's 19th anniversary.

A Kaleidoscope of Color: American Indian Trade Blankets opens Friday at the museum, which is located near Wildhorse Resort & Casino, off Interstate 84, Exit 216. The First Friday event is free of charge. Also, the Kinship Cafe will be frying up Indian tacos for $7.

In addition, Naami Nishaycht, the outdoor living culture village, is open daily through Labor Day weekend. It's free with museum admission.

The village features a teepee and other structures. Visitors can learn about local foods, survival skills, uses of tule reed and the manufacturing of goods, and hear stories from tribal leaders.

Kaleidoscope of Color explores commercially produced trade blankets as an important facet of American Indian culture. It showcases 20 pre-1925 blankets from well-known historic manufacturers, including Pendleton Woolen Mills, Buell Manufacturing Company, J. Capps & Sons, Racine Woolen Mills and Oregon City Woolen Mills. The featured blankets are from private collections and offer a rare opportunity to see some of the most colorful items created by American industrial designers.

Prior to the 19th century, the blankets were a staple of the fur trade, especially in Canada and along the northern tier states. Navajo weavers were known for their fine wearing blankets — often used as robes. A tradition of using a Pendleton blanket as burial attire is still a common practice in Navajo and Zuni communities.

Naami Nishaycht, the outdoor living culture village, is open daily through Labor Day weekend at Tamástslikt Cultural Institute.

At the end of the 19th century, traders encouraged the production of rugs for sale to distant markets. With many Navajo weavers changing their focus, enterprising American woolen mills began producing the brightly colored blankets.

Celebrating the traditions of Cayuse, Umatilla and Walla Walla tribes, Tamástslikt also features permanent exhibits and the Coyote Theater, where visitors are introduced to Spilyáy, the magical coyote who shares about wisdom and foolishness.

Other anniversary events include a museum store summer closeout sale Aug. 10-12. Also, a special family day is set for Saturday, Aug. 26, which includes free cake and afternoon activities. The annual Kidz Pow-Wow, which closes out the outdoor village season, is Saturday, Sept. 2.

Tamástslikt is open Monday through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Kaleidoscope of Color runs through Oct. 14.

Regular admission is $10 for adults, $9 for seniors, $6 for youths 6-17 and free for ages 5 and under. There is a family rate of $25 for four. Also, the Libraries of Eastern Oregon has provided many area libraries with passes that can be checked out. And, admission is free the first Friday of each month.
