Hermiston man injured in crash hauling house

A Hermiston man crashed a truck hauling a manufactured home on Monday morning in Hood River, blocking the west-bound lanes of Interstate 84 for nearly 90 minutes.

Michael Cannon, 36, was exiting the interstate near milepost 64 when the vehicle veered left for an unknown reason, entering the unpaved shoulder and hitting the exit sign and two fog markers. It came to rest across both lanes of I-84.

Cannon was taken by ambulance to Providence Hood River Memorial Hospital for minor injuries, according to a press release from the Oregon State Police.

Tow trucks were dispatched to remove the 1999 Volvo Conventional Truck and manufactured home, and ODOT diverted traffic at the scene. The crash remains under investigation.

Cannon, who owns his own pilot car business, has run for Umatilla County Commissioner several times, most recently in 2014.

Pavement work means delays and lane closures

UMATILLA — Drivers can expect 20 minute delays Wednesday along Highway 730 near Umatilla as road crews perform pavement patching from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The project area is between the Port of Umatilla and the junction with Highway 395. Flaggers will be in the area to control traffic, and motorists are reminded to slow down driving through the work zone.

Construction on Highway 730 was scheduled to be completed before winter, but is now delayed until next year. The area receiving pavement patching will help protect the unfinished work and create a smoother surface during the winter months.

Yellowhawk delays transition to new building

Originally scheduled to open this fall, the Yellowhawk Tribal Health Center in Mission has delayed the transition to its new facility.

Yellowhawk spokeswoman Kaeleen McGuire said construction setbacks mean the new clinic won't start receiving patients until March. A formal grand opening ceremony has not been rescheduled.

The $26.3 million, 63,000-square-foot facility is being built near the Nixyaawii Tribal Governance Center, triple the size of Yellowhawk's current building. The Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation anticipate the facility will house five tribal departments and incorporate energy-conserving technologies.

Once Yellowhawk does complete its move, the fate of the clinic's old facility at 73265 Confederated Way will be in the hands of the CTUIR Board of Trustees.

CTUIR spokesman Chuck Sams said the board spoke about the issue on Monday and referred the issue to Bill Tovey, the tribes' director of economic and community development.

Few people get prison time after series of 2016 protests

PORTLAND (AP) — More than half of the 200 people arrested during protests after last year's presidential elections were not prosecuted and many cases were dismissed altogether, Portland officials said.

Tens of thousands of people took to the Portland streets throughout the year protest the election of President Donald Trump, his policies or other issues.

The high number of cases led the Multnomah County District Attorney's Office and the Police Bureau to focus their efforts on the most dangerous offenders from the protests, Chief Deputy District Attorney Kirsten Snowden told the Oregonian/OregonLive.

Many of the cases from the first six consecutive nights of protests had incomplete or vague initial reports, prosecutors said.

Although police had large amount of video evidence from the protests, officials said they had a hard time identifying suspects among the large crowd of protesters, some of whom wore masks and dressed in all black.
