

CTUIR: Improving the Tribes’ economy a common theme

Cedric Wildbill, a 54-year-old who splits his time between his production company and a job in the CTUIR Office of Childhood Support Enforcement, said he ran for a seat on the board 10 years ago. Although he didn’t win, he said it’s a good experience for younger candidates to mount campaigns for the board and is using his previous experience in his run for the secretary seat against incumbent Kat Brigham. Bob Shippentower, 71, said it’s good that young candidates are running, but they should build their experience with the tribes’ various committees and commissions. Shippentower held an at-large seat on the board from 2009-2015, and is trying to mount a comeback bid after a failed write-in candidacy for general council chair in 2015. Sally Kosey, a 62-year-old at-large candidate, saw value in the trend. “Sometimes we need a younger voice to get a different viewpoint,” she said. Among the candidates interviewed, improving the tribes’ economy and removing barriers for young tribal members were common themes. Wildbill said he would like to see the tribes expand their entrepreneurial arm past the Wildhorse Casino & Resort and into general contracting for federal government agencies like construction and environmental clean-up. Kosey, a retired social services worker and Indian education coordinator, said she wanted to see more job training and support programs for tribal youth so they could work the jobs that non-tribal members were currently filling. On the other side of the age spectrum, Kosey said she would also like to see a tribal assisted living facility for elder members. One issue that won’t show up on the ballot is marijuana legalization. Despite being legal in Oregon, it remains a banned substance on the Umatilla Indian Reservation. The General Council referred the issue to the Board of Trustees, but the board didn’t refer it to the ballot. Radford, a former tribal health liaison for the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Indian Reservation with degrees from Portland State University and the University of New South Wales in Australia, said she was an advocate and supporter for the CTUIR’s treaty rights and high-lighted her support for equity, inclusiveness and engagement. But she’s also the vice-chair for the Warm Springs Cannabis Regulatory Commission, which oversees the Central Oregon tribes’ foray into marijuana production. Radford said mari-juana legalization is a conversa-tion worth having for the board. Elections for the Board of Trustees and the General Council will be held Tuesday at the Nixy-aawii Governance Center from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Contact Antonio Sierra at asierra@eastoregonian.com or 541-966-0836.

FIREs: Westerman Bill would also expedite certain logging projects and $1.27 billion for nutrition assistance for Puerto Rico. That package, however, did not include a long-term fix for fire borrowing. Walden, on the other hand, has publicly supported for the Resilient Federal Forests Act of 2017, which passed the House last week. Dubbed the Westerman Bill for its chief sponsor, Republican Rep. Bruce Westerman of Arkansas, the controversial bill also includes a provision for ending fire borrowing with FEMA dollars, but it goes on to address forest management by expediting certain logging projects and fast-tracking environmental review. Speaking to reporters last week, Walden said the bill — a version of which has passed the House for five straight years — will likely require some compromise in the Senate, though it has a good opportunity of reaching the President’s desk under a more receptive administration. Wyden, however, remains opposed to the bill which he said is “freighted with anti-environmental riders that create more problems than they solve, and that would likely harm forest health.” He said the Wildfire Disaster Funding Act is the best way to fix fire borrowing and secure dependable funding for future restoration. The Westerman Bill attempts to accelerate the pace and scale of that work by providing categorical exclu-sions for tree thinning projects up to 10,000 acres in size, or 30,000 acres if they are developed by a collaborative group. A categorical exclusion would help speed up environmental review under the National Environmental Policy Act. The bill also directs the Secretary of Agriculture to create a pilot program for resolving lawsuits filed against forest management projects in arbitration, as opposed to going to court, and limits plaintiffs’ ability to recover their attorney fees under the Equal Access to Justice Act. Opponents argue the bill caters to logging interests at the expense of forests, gutting both NEPA and the Endangered Species Act. The bill did pass the House in a bipartisan 232-188 vote, and has since been referred to the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

POKER: Tournament play generally lasts about 12 hours

cache ebbed and flowed, he demonstrated the art of holding and folding. Older players paid their respects to Barnes. “He’s the dude,” said one. “He’s one of the best,” said another. Across the table from Barnes sat Jorge Canada, a South American-born poker player who sits 25th on the Wildhorse Poker Tournament All-Time list. The Kennewick car salesman has played Wildhorse for 10 years straight, winning $82,054 and earning all-around honors the last three years in a row. Canada’s chip pile had dwindled slightly. Barnes, Canada and the others around the table share a unique vocabulary. There’s the big blind and the small blind, the button and the flop. The rainbow and the river. “They’ve got their own language,” said tournament director Jeremy Maddern. “Unless you know poker, you are walking into a brand new world.” Only seniors could play in the Wednesday afternoon tournament, so Canada, who is 49, and Barnes were playing a side game for cash. Maddern said 500-to-600 players show up to play on Fridays and Saturdays during these tourna-ments and from 200-250 players Sunday through Thursday. The tournaments generally last about 12 hours. Maddern described the group of poker players as close-knit. “It’s like a family reunion every time we have one of these,” he said. That’s not to say they don’t get competitive when the cards are dealt. There is money to be won.

Tuesday’s winner, James Morris, of Olympia, Washington, won $19,452. On the all-time winners list, Justin Monk has taken home a total of $195,458 over the years. Barnes may end up on that list someday, but for now, he’s just happy to play. “What I enjoy is developing the ability to read players — their facial expressions, their body language. Sometimes it can be a tell,” he said. “That to me is fascinating.” Four hours later, Barnes still sat at the table, $50 higher than when he started. He couldn’t have been happier.
